ASB desire granted; Rampage gets 'Justice'

Nineteen-year-old Joseph A. Justice is serving as fall editor of the Rampage.

Justice, whose appointment was announced by Rampage adviser Peter Lang, is a second-year journalism major from Fresno and a 1971 graduate of Roosevelt High School.

Other top staff positions will be filled by:

- Russell Moshier, managing editor.
- Richard Zallian, news editor.
- Rose Marie Caglia, sports editor.
- Phil Subriar, photo editor.
- Judith Littrell, copy editor.

Ken Nakashige is advertising manager and Mike Rhodes is circulation manager. Other staff members are John Sanchez, Dave Schoenwald, Ann Stephens, Tom Wright and Izean Rim.

"Our staff this semester is neither large nor experienced," Lang said. "But they have a fine attitude, good enthusiasm, and that's more than half the battle. I wouldn't be surprised if we were able to repeat again as an All-American newspaper."

The Rampage is riding a two-semester string of All-American ratings, achieved under the editorships of Kit Jones and Dave Waddell.

Duo protests Marine recruiters

Monday two students who didn't agree with Marine recruiters in the foyer of the cafeteria took it upon themselves to tell the other side of the story, as one of them put it.

The students, Michael Rhodes and Robert Combs, wore posters which depicted the role of the Marines as that of assassins.

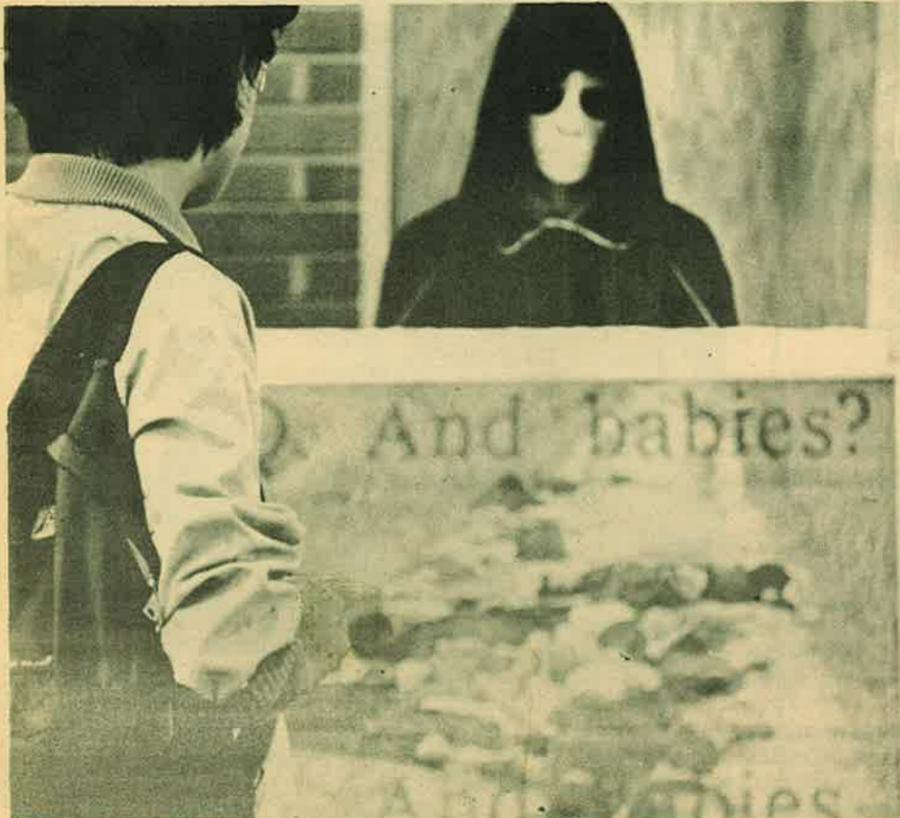

Little attention was attracted by the demonstrators until the word was out that the police might be called to remove them.

According to Ms. Deakins, when she first approached the students she asked them to cease. They replied that they would not. Then she asked one of them to come to her office so she could explain the policies relating to poster approval. One of them did accompany her and after she explained, he told her they had no intention of leaving.

Rhodes said Doris Deakins, dean of women, told him that if he and his friend weren't off the campus in five minutes they would be arrested, because the signs had not been approved by her. Rhodes also said that Ms. Deakins told him that their signs would not be approved while the Marines were on campus. So they decided to continue the protest.

'Sly' concert comes off; so do pieces of fence

Well, the Saturday night concert finally came off, and so did pieces of the fence at John Euless ball park.

When Russ Bader, vice president of Silvermoon inc. introduced the first band he said, "This is the first in a series of concerts in Fresno." And it may well have been the first in Fresno but it was most likely the last in John Euless ball park.

Paul Starr, dean of special services, said that he is going to recommend that the park not be used for that type of entertainment anymore. And he has good reason. Starr would not guess the dollar damage done to the park, but others have estimated it near $1,000.

The concert started on schedule with Stoneground warming up the audience. Mixed reactions greeted the English group, Slade, when they played "Hear Me Calling" and "Move Over, Baby." When Commander Cody and his Lost Planet Airmen gave a sample of rock from the 50's mixed with their country style the crowd's reaction was great.

Then after about 15 minutes of waiting, Bader told the audience that problems with the sound equipment would cause a delay.

Twenty minutes later Bader reported the equipment had been fixed and Sly and the Family Stone would be out as soon as Sly changed clothes.

Fifteen minutes later members of the Family Stone came out and began to tune their instruments. About 10 minutes after that Sly finally made his appearance.

An estimated 10,000 attended, but the concert didn't go over as well as expected. With the acrobatics of Slade, knocking over microphones, the long wait for Sly and the trouble with the sound equipment, many people left while Sly and the Family Stones were still playing.

Some patrons came with ice chests full of beer and wine, and bags of marijuana. Graduate social work students from FSU were hired to monitor the concert. Many of them stood around drinking with the people in the audience.

New senators elected to fill vacant seats

Under a disputed objection from part of the voting quorum, the FCC Student Senate filled three empty seats. The new senators are James Canales, Debbie Cleland and Willie Wilson.

Canales and Miss Cleland expressed interest in the senate. Canales has helped in recent events of the senate, such as the Ramburger Roundup, and received a recommendation from ASB Vice President Eddie Anguiano.

Miss Cleland was unable to serve on the senate last year because she was working. She now has some free time and said she wants to put that time in the senate.

Wilson has also been active in helping senate members, and received a recommendation from ASB President Ken Brown. He is from Oklahoma and was president of a chapter of NAACP in Oklahoma City.

Canales was elected on first ballot. The dispute arose when only 26 votes were counted. The claim that there should have been 30 total votes was rebuked when it was shown that four voters cast ballots for only one of the still available two seats.

On money matters, the senate appropriated $3,863 for all school transportation for this fall semester, and also appropriated $500 from reserve funds to add to $500 already okayed for Madrigal Singers uniforms this year.

The senate has okayed plans to have the Serendipity Singers for a noon concert and also the Danish Gymnastics Team to perform during lunch hour. There are plans in the works to get a band that will fit the senate's budget for an evening concert this semester.

The senate expressed thanks to those who helped in cleanup duties after the Ramburger Roundup.

Ms. Deakins then called Kenneth Shrum, chief of the college police. Shrum in turn notified Richard Cleland, dean of men, who advised that there was no need for police action.

Discussion about what to do about the protesters led to a decision to let them stay as long as they did not block traffic to the cafeteria and the recruiters table.

Cleland said that he told the students that failure to comply with the college policies on poster approval could result in disciplinary action. He also said that if they would have come to him for approval of the posters he would have given it. But that they would not have been permitted to demonstrate next to the Marine recruiting table.

Tuesday the demonstrators returned again, this time with Combs dressed as the "Spectre of Death."

Editorial

Keep cards, letters coming

In one of the beginning issues of almost every college newspaper there comes the first editorial from the new editor. It usually presents the plans he has for the coming semester and maybe some good old "get-involved" recruiting.

This is tradition. And who am I to destroy the foundation of the American press?

This semester we plan to learn with you what good reporting really is. There will be times when you won't like the approach we take on certain articles and there will be times that you do. I hope the times that you do outnumber the times that you don't.

I also hope that you remember this editorial when you are explaining to someone an issue that you firmly believe in. And remember that it was written in this editorial that any letter to the editor that is written in a serious, or humorous, state of mind has strong chances of getting printed.

I realize that this is only a community college newspaper. But you should realize also that if you have a letter printed in the Rampage it would be as though you spent two or three days just telling people what you thought.

Maybe you don't want to write a letter to the editor and you still want to be heard. My suggestion is come up and tell us what's on your mind. Come up and tell us if your English instructor just jumped out of the second story window. We need something to brighten our day too.

There is another point I cannot stress too much. If you think of an idea for an article, or perhaps think you would like to write a guest article, come and talk to us about it.

We feel as though we offer a public service. It is our intention to try to report on every issue with an outlook as fair and unbiased as possible. It is obvious that unbiased reporting cannot always be accomplished; personal opinions and judgements do interfere with individual perception. But if you think we have overstepped our bounds, you'll find us in SC-211

Don't forget to write.

2,000 eat Ramburgers, inhale smoke

Although it looked like a big party, there was an added purpose to the 15th annual Ramburger Roundup last Friday evening: to let the faculty and students meet each other in an atmosphere more relaxed than that of the classroom.

The Roundup attracted about 2,000 people, about the same as last year. But according to Eddie Anguiano, ASB vice president and chairman of the event, participation was greater this year.

"Last year there was less talk, but this year it seemed as though everyone knew each other," he said.

The festivities began with the serving of the dinner, a bargain at 75 or 25 cents. Soon after the food was served, the FCC band set the beat for a few routines of the pep girls.

The traditional competition to see which club could build the most elaborate and original booth resulted in a tie for first place between the Ski Club and MECHA. The Veterans Club took second place and the LDSSA booth came in third.

The highlight of the evening came when the rock group, The Stantons, began to play. They started out hindered at first because one of their guitar players was late, but he soon showed up and the band began to get it together.

The Roundup seemed a success but the participant have a suggestion for the next year's planners. Don't set the tables downward from the grills; people like to eat hamburgers, not smoke.

Guest Opinion

Equal justice under the law

(From the Renegade Rep., Bakersfield College)

The concept of "Equal Justice under the Law" is frequently ignored by our lawmakers. I refer to an inequity that cuts across racial and ethnic lines and insures equal injustice for its victims. Social Security is a sham.

There exists a large group of women in this country, wage salary earners, that has been taxed to the maximum under provisions of the Social Security Act. These women, assuming they're married, can look forward to receiving 50 per cent of their husbands' entitlement when they retire. This practice doesn't serve to encourage any appreciation of standards of fair play.

This is not to suggest that ways of circumventing this provision of the law do not exist. Divorce courts are still doing business and a couple can dissolve a marriage, "irreconcilable differences" will work here in California, and they can continue to live together. (These couples may be required to indulge in a little perjury, but then who can say that people may not have "irreconcilable differences" after 40 years or so of marriage.) That divorce decree could mean a 33 1/3 per cent increase in income.

Many widows and widowers in Florida have found it most expedient to forego the ministrations of clergy, or those of justices of the peace, and have resorted to "playing house". (The elderly, particularly where money is concerned, appear to harbor few illusions about the sanctity of marriage. At least for the "second time around.")

Another aspect of our Social Security laws that hovers on the brink of inequity, is the provision that wives who have never worked a day in their lives are also entitled to that sacred 50 per cent. Before someone writes to inform me that providing "tender-loving care" to a family is as important as earning a living, let me ask a question. Did the wage earner in the family contribute one and one-half times the tax? If not, why should the retired couple be entitled to retired pay for the husband plus additional money for the wife. The family only had to forego the use of the money contributed by the husband.

If some one would care to put forward the argument that children from the homes of working mothers are more prone to become juvenile delinquents, I would appreciate some documentation.

I do not propose that wives who have never worked for wages be denied the pittance that passes for Social Security. I only advocate that our Congress act in the interests of fair play. -- give credit where credit is due and pay off accordingly.

We would especially like to express our appreciation to Douglas E. Peterson and Eddie Anguiano, as well as to the entire staff, for the really fine job of cleaning up after the food had been served.

12 new teachers here

Fresno City College welcomed 12 new faculty members to the instructional staff this fall, one of the lowest totals of new personnel in several years.

Officials said the relatively low number of newcomers is primarily due to a decline in enrollment, along with a tendency for many teachers to remain at their positions more than in previous years because of the abundance of teachers seeking jobs.

Among the new staff members are Willard Varty and Mrs. Karen Trapnell, staffing a new department at FCC. They will run the dental hygiene program, with Dr. Varty as department head and Mrs. Trapnell as an instructor. Varty is a Dr. of dental surgery. He received his dental training from the University of Iowa and his teaching credential from Valley City Teachers College in N. D. He formerly directed the dental hygiene program at Chabot College.

Mrs. Trapnell received her degree from the University of Penn. and Columbia Univ. She formerly taught at the University of Penn.

Two other newcomers in the medical programs at Fresno City College are Barbara Alfaro and Morris W. Ramey. Mrs. Alfaro is an instructor in the vocational nursing department and Ramay in the inhalation therapy program.

Mrs. Alfaro received her A.A. degree from College of the Sequoias and her R.N. from Sacramento Junior College. She recently worked professionally at local hospitals for several years.

Ramay caomes to FCC from St. Agnes Hospital, where he was supervisor of the inhalational therapy department. He was educated at Bakersfield College, FCC, and Fresno State College.

Three "locals" joined the FCC vocational training program with Ray Husted, Godfrey Leon and Leroy Kinzel taking up positions in carpentry, auto mechanics and aeronautics, respectively.

Husted is a graduate of Chowchilla High School and FCC, with an A.A. degree in building technology. He has served four years as an apprentice carpenter and is a journeyman in all phrases of carpentry.

Leon is a graduate of Edison High School in Fresno as well as FCC. He joins the auto mechanic staff from a local automobile dealership, where he supervised the maintenance department.

Kenzel is a graduate of Reedley

Fresno Folklore — finger pickin' good...

When you first walk into the Fresno Folklore Center you have the feeling you're in the wrong place, no matter where you thought you were supposed to be. It's not like the stereotype you probably have in your mind of a place where music is played and taught.

The walls are covered with a poor man's wood paneling made from the bottom of old wooden grape trays. The only stage on the premises is a pallet covered with boards.

The Center, at 2037 N. Wishon

(one block north of Weldon), was started by David Halk, Sam Williams and Joey McMurry.

Halk, a fulltime student at FCC, was born in San Francisco and spent most of his life in northern California. He said he has been playing the guitar for about five or six years and has been teaching off and on for one year.

Williams, an ex-FCC student, was born in San Diego and traveled throughout the United States as a child. Sam came to Fresno in 1960 and has been teaching people music for three years.

McMurry, the only member of the staff born in Fresno, is also the only member who hasn't attended FCC. Joey said he's been playing the guitar six years and has been teaching guitar one and a half years.

The three started the Center, Williams said, to offer people a place to come and play their music as well as to hear others perform. By the looks of a recent hootenanny the idea is okay.

The hootenanny was, to say the least, informal. Fifteen people attended, and it was obvious that they had varying life styles.

Most of the audience was made up of young people dressed in levis and a shirt. But four appeared to be more conservative than the others, one in particular, who looked to be about 26 years of age, was dressed in a suit.

In addition to the concerts and hootenannies they offer guitar and banjo lessons in finger picking. Finger picking, according to Sam Williams, can usually be learned in four lessons given once a week at a cost of $3.50 per lesson.

Concerts are offered at the Center every Friday and Saturday night. Admission to these concerts is $1; they begin at 9.

Hassen scores seven goals for FCC Tankers

At an invitational tournament at Cabrillo last Friday and Saturday the F.C.C. water polo team got the chance to practice some of the polishing techniques needed for league competition.

Losing the first game to American River gave the Rams a slow start, with the action picking up in a 13-6 victory over Sacramento.

The dominant scorers in the second round were veterans Sean Hassen, shooting seven goals, and Vince Jura, five.

His overall performance earned Mike Collins a starting position as goalie, with Leo Walker moving to the field.

Coach Stephens observed that the defense had picked up considerably and that "our offense had made some of the mistakes necessary for improvement."

After our third and final game, a loss to Modesto, the team came home with an idea of how tough last night's season opener with the Pirates may be. This first of the Valley Conference games was played at Modesto.

Honored Rams

Fullback Dave Pitta and defensive tackle Tom Ryska were honored as Rams-of-the-Week, for their outstanding play in the 25-13 loss to El Camino Saturday night.

Pitta, who played for Modesto Junior College two seasons ago, picked up 67 yds. in 19 trips against the rugged Camino defensive eleven. His performance moved him ahead of tailback, Casey Clinger, as the Ram's leading rusher with a two-game total of 118 yards.

"Pitta is a real nifty running back," said head coach Clare Salughter. "He's a hard runner who gives a solid performance each time out."

Ryska, at 6-4, 220, has made remarkable improvement since he left McLane High School two years ago.

Greg Hall wins meet

Fresno City College's Greg Hall swept the defending state cross-country champions, the El Camino Warriors, and took first place.

Hall came in with a time of 20:34 over the Fort Washington course to win the event by 18 seconds Saturday night.

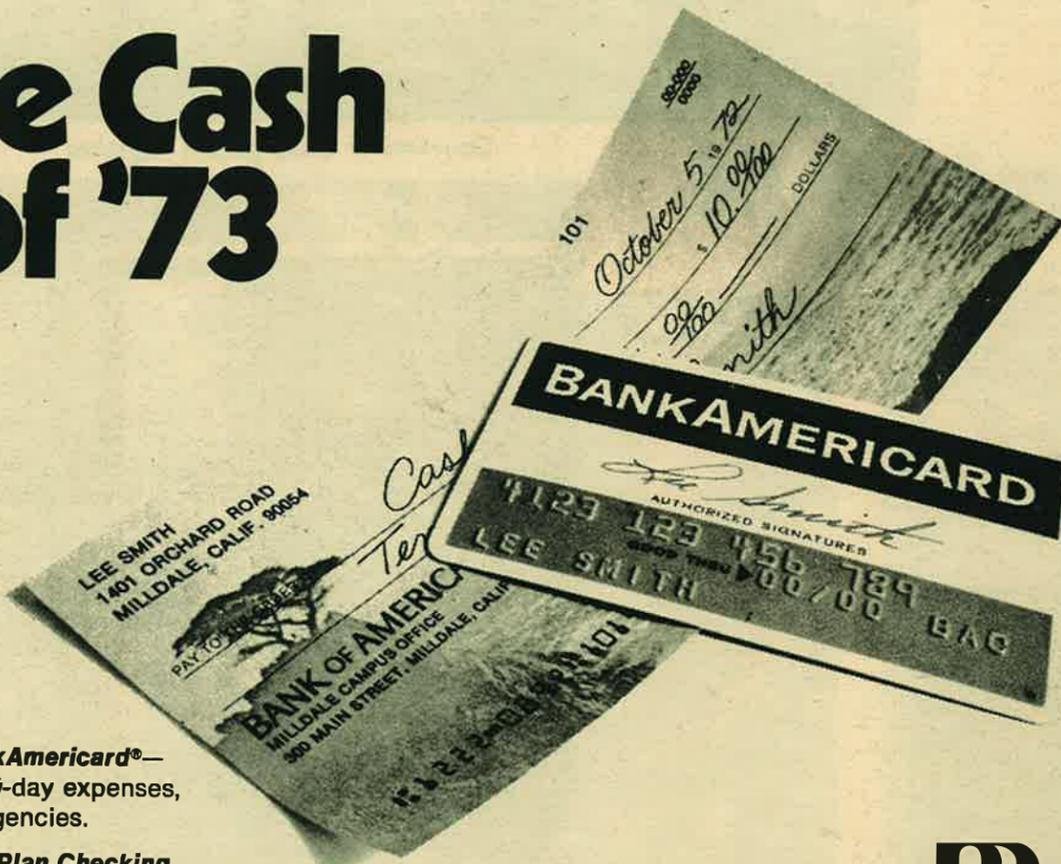

The Warriors took the next four places to win the non-conference dual meet, 21-39.

Jim Hartig, a freshman, was the next to finish for the Rams, placing sixth with a time of 21:43, followed by teammates Sam Sapien, ninth, 22:31; Harry Nicholas, 11th, 22:36, and Scott Fertig, 12th, 22:41.

Rams lose, face Laney

FCC's Rams hope for better success Saturday against Laney College after absorbing a brutal 25-13 loss at the hands of the tough El Camino Warriors.

Laney, defending co-champions of the Golden Gate Conference, will battle the Rams in Ratcliffe Stadium. Laney also took a thrashing from El Camino, two weeks ago.

Both El Camino and FCC had star running backs on the bench. The Warriors were without the services of Dave Darden, and the Rams lost Jim Davis, former great runner for McLane who played for UC Berkeley's freshman squad last year, with a broken leg.

El Camino was held to 226 yards on total offense, but was able to capitalize on such breaks as fumbles and punting. Although the Warriors fumbled seven times, they only lost the ball once.

The Rams, on the other hand, fumbled only three times, but lost the ball twice. Misfortune hit Ram punter Rusty Reed, as he shanked two punts, which the Warriors took over with excellent field position.

The Warrior defense was outstanding. The Rams could muster only one sustained drive.

53 yards to the Warriors 27. Ram quarterback Rick Jelmini, who is gaining poise from game to game, broke loose for a 22 yard run and unloaded a 44-yarder to Del White under tremendous pressure. Otherwise Warrior defense was impossible to penetrate.

The Rams scored all their points in the final period on two freak plays. From the Warrior 5-yard line, Ram fullback Ray Luna carried to the three, where he fumbled into the end zone. Ram tailback Jeff Johnson recovered in the end zone for the first score.

Less than two minutes later, Rod Perry gathered in a punt for the Rams and was met by most of the Warrior special team. But Perry pitched back to safety Mike Jackson, who already was having a fine night on defense, and Jackson rambled for 45 yards for the other Ram touchdown. White converted, and the scoring was over at 25-13.

Curtiss Wright once again shined on defense for the Rams, along with Luna, Jackson, and Dennis Gunter.

Laney should be an even match for the Rams. These two fine teams will be concentrating most heavily on their running games.

Ram coach Clare Slaughter will continue to use the talented Jelmini more and more, but admits his bread and butter is the running game, led by Luna, Dave Pitta, who gained 67 yards against El Camino, and Casey Clinger.

Laney has a one-man running game, fullback Leanell Jones, who was the leading JC scorer in the state last year with 16 touchdowns. The Eagles also have a talented punter named Rick Faulk, who averaged a brilliant 41.8 per boot last year, best in the history of their conference.

The Laney contest should also be a defensive one. The Eagles can offset the fine Ram defense with 10 lettermen from last year in the probable starting lineup.

Ping Pong tourney set

A ping pong tournament is scheduled Friday, October 6, in the mens' gym, open to all ASB card holders who can hold a paddle. Awards will be given to the top three winners.

The tournament will include men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles.

Signups are being taken in the men's gym, Room 106-B.

New course goes beyond basic first-aid practice

Don't panic if you see several ambulances or uniformed technicians on campus. More than likely they are students involved in a new program at FCC this year.

These students may be able to save more lives as a result of a new course designed to take them a step beyond basic first-aid techniques in medical knowledge.

Ralph Porter, a dynamic newcomer to FCC and coordinator of the program, has an unusual and varied background himself. Not only does he teach anatomy and physiology at FCC, he served as a medical technician in the Navy, and later became a licensed vocational nurse.

Porter, who teaches the anatomy and physiology segments of the course, said the program is a challenge to himself as well as the students.

Health Education 3 is a kind of in-service training program. Most of the students enrolled are also employed in facets of medical emergency care: emergency room nurses, ambulance technicians, fireman and policemen, as well as a few physicians.

It is not an uncommon occurrence, to have uniformed ambulance technicians rush out of class to answer an emergency call. There is never a dull moment when you are in a profession that saves people's lives.

This course is part of an allied health program which involves the upgrading of emergency medical care in the community, Porter said. Eventually it may develop into a program that will upgrade and standardize emergency medical care all across the country.

Drs. James Kemp, for the Valley Medical Center, and Jack Murray for St. Agnes Hospital, are mainly responsible for setting up the curriculum. Almost 80 percent of the faculty are volunteer physicians and nurses.

The class will visit the two full time emergency wings, intensive care and coronary care units, so they may observe first hand what in the classroom can only be talked about.

The curriculum includes lectures on the skeleton, muscular system, the nervous system, respiratory, circulatory and digestive systems.

Management of shock, drug overdose and insulin insufficiency, are other facets of the program, also artificial respiration and resuscitation. Also time will be spent on hemorrhage control, bandaging, injuries to bones and splintering; fractures and dislocations plus special rescue methods in cases of electrical, water, automobile, explosions or other disasters involving mass casualties.

Also studied will be ways to deal with families when emergency situations occur, and being able to cope with the psychological problems of patients themselves.

Woodpushers prepare for weekend tourney

FCC chessplayers and others will be able to get a taste of tournament competition in an amateur chess tourney planned Saturday and Sunday in the cafeteria.

The tournament is sponsored by William Myers and the FCC Chess club, and will with registration, begin at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Four rounds of play are planned, two Saturday and two Sunday, in Conference Rooms A and B, said DeWayne Rail and Peter Lang, advisors of the club. Starting times are 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Saturday, 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Rail said an entry fee of $5. will be charged to cover expenses and prizes. Players also must be members of the U.S. Chess Federation, which can be joined there at special rates of $4. for persons under 21, $8. for others.

Chess, the game of Kings, has been enjoying an unparalleled wave of popularity in the U.S.A. in the wake of American Bobby Fischer's successful battle for the world championship.

FCC instructor Phil Smith, Fresno's top player and a rated expert, recently played several games simultaneously in a department store exhibition, drawing a few and winning the rest.

The FCC Chess Club, which meets at 12:15 p.m. Tuesdays in Conference Room B and Thursdays in Conference Room C, is preparing to compete in a proposed chess league.

Present plans, Land said, call for three team matches a semester in a four-team conference composed of FCC, West Hills, College of the Sequoias and Reedley, with competition on five boards.

S.F. tenor begins series

Tenor James Schwabacher will be featured in the first of 17 community service presentations by Fresno City College and the State Center Community College District for 1972-73.

The San Francisco singer will perform at 8 p.m. Friday, October 6, in the auditorium after two days spent on campus making presentations to classes and talking to students.

Larry Kavanaugh, FCC director of community services, said most of the 17 scheduled events, including Schwabacher's appearance, will be free, and all will be open to the public.

Some of the more widely known attractions will include comedian Mort Sahl, psychologist Bruno Bettelheim, and black legislator Julian Bond. Two of several musical groups are High Country and the Ramirez Brass.

Co-sponsors of some of the events include the Associated Student Body, Fresno Philharmonic, Fresno Ethnic Dance Committee, Mountain Area Cultural Committee (Oakhurst), Fresno Opera Assn., Fresno Arts Center, and Central California Folk Music Society.

Schwabacher has sung many roles with the San Francisco Opera and is a leading tenor of major Bach festivals. His program, "Heinrich Heine: A Poet's Love," will feature lieder music inspired by the poet's lyrics and composed by Schumann, Mendelssohn, Brahms, Liszt, Grieg, Charles Ives and others.

The club has short business meetings on Tuesday followed by play, and the Thursday sessions

Tom Riddle and Marcia Reid finished in a tie for the club championship in a round-robin tournament last spring, with Art Brethen third. Miss Reid and Brethen are still at FCC.
