College may be held liable for campus rape

Special to Rampage

— Campus rape is unfortunately on the increase. While students, university police, legal counsel for the colleges, and other members of the academic community are becoming increasingly concerned over the problem, a university professor believes one way to curtail the crime may be to hold the post-secondary institutions liable as third party defendants.

In the September issue of TRIAL, the national legal newsmagazine of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America (ATLA), Dr. Leonard Territo, professor of criminal justice at the University of South Florida, Tampa, claims that rape is one of the most unreported of all serious crimes.

The reasons for this are numerous, he says. The victim doesn't believe the suspect will be apprehended; she thinks she will receive unsympathetic treatment from the police; unwanted publicity; fear of reprisal by the rapist; and apprehension from the media reports which could lead to being further victimized by the court proceedings.

Territo says that post-secondary institutions can protect themselves from liability providing precautions are taken.

Attorneys, when determining liability, will examine

"what actions, if any, the institution took or failed to take to reduce the possibility of rapes occurring on campus."

These "actions" include investigating the specific campus area where the attack took place. There are frequently campus problem areas where previous sexual attacks, robberies, and other crimes have taken place, he reports. If such areas do exist it should be expected that corrective actions like additional lighting, security, or emergency telephone services should have been added, Territo says.

Lighting, or the absence of lighting could be considered a factor in the occurrence of a crime, the author says. Based on standards set by the Illuminating Engineering Society of North America, the building exteriors, main and secondary parking lots, and sports and recreational areas, should be sufficiently lighted. Territo explains that even if the universities comply with the lighting recommendations of the Society, many universities, due to energy costs, turn off the fixtures.

Overgrown shrubs, making concealment easy for would-be attackers, threatens a woman's security, particularly around the ground floor windows of dormitories, he claims. It is the grounds-keeper's responsibility to ensure the shrubs and hedges are well-trimmed and not improperly placed.

Classes scheduled at night in remote areas of the campus enhances the opportunity for attacks against women, the author says. "The campus security force has a burden of responsibility either to assign personnel to these areas or at least to redirect campus patrol activity to these areas during the most critical hours," he warns.

The lack of telephones in remote campus areas poses a threat to the unsuspecting victims, he says. Emergency telephone systems installed in these areas, would make easy access to the police possible, and reduce the possibility of an attack.

Security is also a factor for after-hours and weekend workers. Protection for the faculty and staff personnel can be enhanced by making sure all exterior doors are locked after-hours and on weekends.

Keeping women abreast of ways they can protect themselves should be provided through university-sponsored rape prevention programs. Information contained in pamphlets, factsheets, and booklets, on rape prevention should be available to keep women better informed, Territo stresses.

Keeping the campus secure through detailed checks and implementing crime prevention programs for both students and staff is the responsibility of the security personnel. Additionally, security personnel should monitor crimes being committed on campus in order to evaluate how such crimes may be prevented in the future, says Territo.

In conclusion, the author says campus rapes will never totally disappear. However, the guidelines listed will help to eliminate the threat. "If counsel for colleges and universities are interested in reducing the possibility of becoming third-party defendants in such cases, then adherence to these suggestions will help them accomplish that goal," Territo advises.

Kessler declares priorities are needed

by Dan Immel

Board of trustees candidate Dr. Warren Kessler contends priorities are essential in maintaining financially secure community college district.

"Trustees should be setting priorities and giving direction to college administrators," said Kessler during an informal meeting with Fresno City College Associated Students president Steve Steuart.

Campaigning for the Area 5 seat on the State Center Community College District board of trustees, Kessler met with Steuart in the AS Senate headquarters before undertaking a walking tour of the campus Tuesday afternoon.

During the 50-minute discussion, Kessler was often critical of what he sees as a definite lack of priorities by incumbent board members.

"By defining priorities," said Kessler, "the SCCCDC will be in a better position to ensure students will not be shut out of essential classes."

Kessler stressed the necessity of closer ties between trustees and students to provide a bridge between student needs and district priorities.

Kessler noted the first obligation of the board of trustees is to the students, not themselves.

He is firm in his support of this concept and finds certain fringe benefits available to trustees counter-productive in achieving financial stability within the district.

"The position is considered to be a community service," Kessler said, "and should not be a paying job."

Currently board members are paid a fixed sum for each meeting attended plus travel expenses.

Kessler cites the full-coverage health insurance plan that is offered to board members, at a premium rate of $2,000 per year which is absorbed by the district, as contrary to the commitment of the SCCCDC to trim unnecessary fat from the district budget.

Kessler told Steuart should he be endorsed by the Student Senate, he would in return offer continual support of student needs and demands.

"Students have plenty of financial obligations as it is and are having a hard time trying to convince legislators that they are," he said.

Although Steuart indicated Kessler would probably receive the endorsement of the Student Senate he would not confirm it.

Editorial

by Denise Bartlett

Last Saturday night the Fresno City College Ram Football team played its first home game of the season. The game was disappointing, but the crowd was a disgrace.

It is hard to believe that a college with an enrollment of more than 14,000 students had such a poor turnout for its own home athletic events.

The estimated attendance of Saturday's game was 1,200. Of those, only about 200 were FCC students. There were alumni there, and also teachers and administrators, but very few current students.

What is it about California State University, Fresno that draws an average attendance of 25,000 to each home football games? Is it because it is a winning team, or is it simply a matter of school pride?

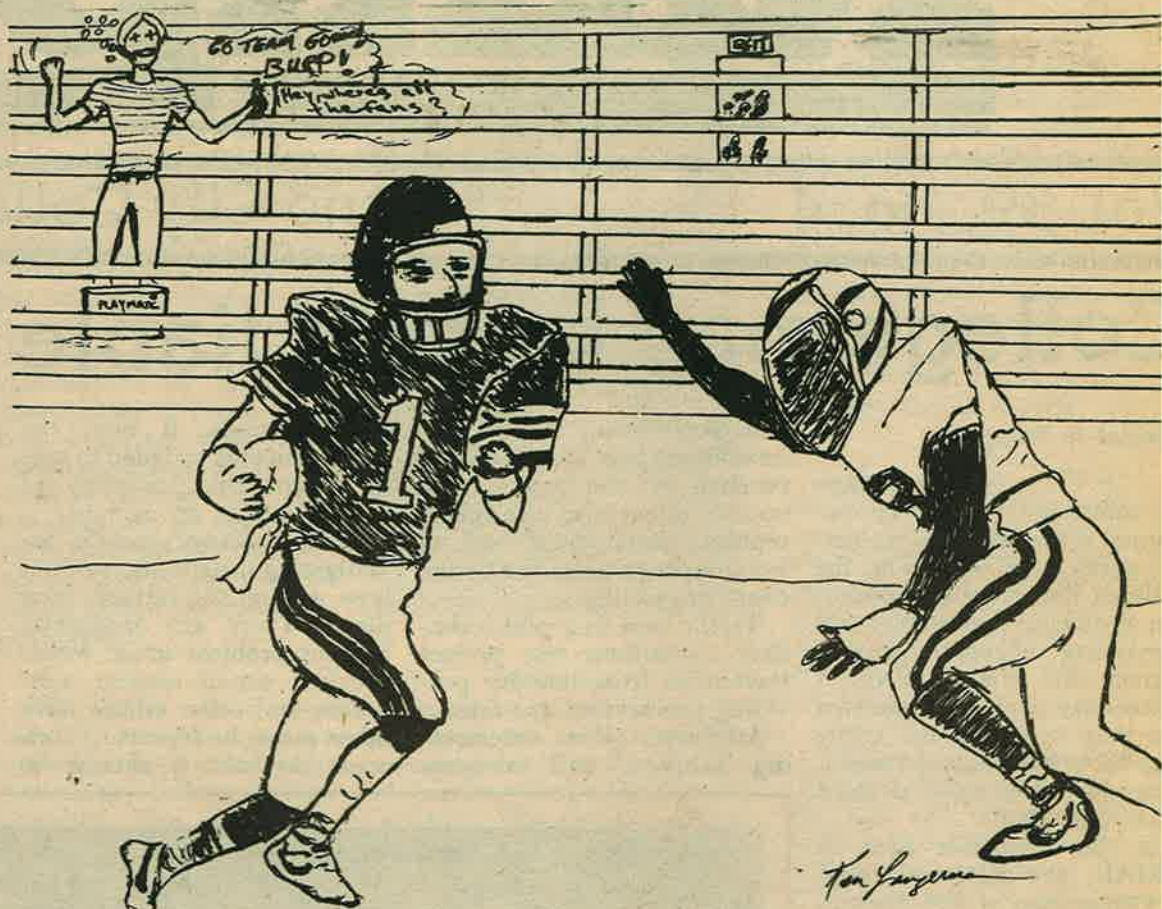

"The red wave" at Fresno State has become almost an obsession with many Fresno fans. According to Fresno State's ticket office, approximately 18,000 people have purchased season tickets to the Bulldog home games. Prices on these tickets range from $28 to $63.

According to Jim Alvernez, Sports Information Officer for FCC, prior to last Saturday's game, less than 100 people had purchased season ticket to Ram football games at a price of only $10 for the entire season.

The players on the FCC team practice and play just as hard as the Bulldog team. They put in as many hours on the field, but see little or no support from their fellow students.

Perhaps that lack of support is reflected on the scoreboard. It makes sense that a winning team is one which has people in the stands supporting it.

FCC may be "just a junior college," but our athletic department deserves support from the student body. Perhaps that is what would make FCC more than just another JC.

Letters to the editor

Ratcliffe rally questioned

Dear Editor,

What ever happened to that "organization", located in the bungalow next to yours, that calls itself "Rally for Ratcliffe"? They have been keeping such a low profile around the community lately that myself and other concerned students were wondering just what the heck they have been up to.

The Ratcliffe fundraising drive began over a year ago and so far there seems to be very little to come out of it. Sure, I remember a few Jog-a-thons, some concerts that really got alot of people mad, maybe a dinner or lunch here and there but even after a year of all this, I still get splinters in my seat whenever I sit in the bleachers in that decrepit stadium.

Not only am I, a taxpaying student, disappointed at the concept of "Rally for Ratcliffe" but I also share the disappointment of a significant number of students and some faculty, as to the lack of progress by the fundraising effort.

It seems silly that a professional fundraising group such as the Janotta Company, organizers of the Ratcliffe effort, would have so much difficulty raising $950,000. Even more peculiar is the recent financial report by the group to the Board of Trustees. According to the report, over $250,000 had been raised by the end of August. Over half the money raised thus far has been allocated for staff salaries and operating expenses. What kind of airline are they running anyway?

It is logical that when someone performs a service, he or she should be duly compensated. But where is the line drawn on compensation?

At the present salary and expense rate the Ratcliffe drive must raise over $1.9 million just to realize the intended goal of $950,000.

Perhaps a student organization could run a smoother operation than the present group of fundraisers that claim to be professionals. Give us a break.

Sincerely

Reporter's reply

Dear R.A.G.,

Thanks to your response on our editorial of Sept. 16. It is heartening to know that the seeds has not fallen on barren ground.

I agree with you 100 percent on many points. The cases of hypocrisy and injustices committed in our society which you pointed out, are just too true to be ignored.

And this is precisely why we stand high above totalitarian societies such as those found in iron curtain countries, because we still have the capacity to recognize our foibles and mistakes and move to correct them.

For every act of injustice, a hundred voices rise in protest. And as a whole, the law still reigns supreme. Where in the world have you heard of a chief of state being booted out of office for violating the law? It can happen only here.

And so long as we have people, like you, R.A.G., who has the moral courage to stand up and denounce the unjust, expose the hypocrites and fight the wrongdoers, America will still be the greatest place to live in on the face of the earth.

Sincerely yours,
Levi C. Pagsuberon

Bits-n-Pieces

All in a day's work

by Denise Bartlett

I never thought I'd see the day come when my entire life revolved around a little black book. Not an address book, but an appointment book.

Maybe it's a sign of our busy times, but I find I'm not the only one who can't function until they have looked into that blasted book to see what the day has in store for them.

One friend of mine actually has two appointment books. One for his regular appointments, class schedules and social events; and the other for scheduling his class assignments and tests. When I asked him why he has two books, he replied "Why not?"

Tragedy struck me the other day however. I got to work and discovered I had left my trusty sentinel at home. After controlling my panic, I decided to test my memory and tried to recall what my appointments were without the book.

"After all," I reasoned, "I AM smarter than that book."

I sat down at my desk and began an hour by hour list of the things I knew had to be done for the day. After completing the list I discovered several holes, and thus tackled the job of filling them in.

Sweat beads began to show on my forehead as I pondered what happens on Tuesdays at 10 a.m. in my life, and what happens at 1 p.m.

One of my co-workers stopped by my office to inquire about me after hearing me groan in frustration. "What in the world is wrong with you?" asked the co-worker spying the look on my face and papers scattered around here and there on the floor.

I told this person of my dilemma and she shook her head sadly recalling a time when she had forgotten her appointment book.

"It threw my entire schedule off for weeks," she said.

Upon hearing this, I threw up my hands, and marched off to request permission to go home and retrieve my own book.

Permission granted, I dashed home to search for the missing "bible."

Frantically I searched the apartment for this precious item, but to no avail. It wasn't there.

I then dashed to the Rampage office at FCC to see if maybe, just maybe, it might be there.

It wasn't there either.

I finally gave up the chase when I realized I had spent the better part of the morning looking for the book which tells me what I was supposed to be doing.

When I finally returned home that night, I stopped to reflect upon what messages I should be getting from all of my trials.

"Should I really be letting a book rule my entire life?"

"Why did I panic just because I couldn't find that one little book?"

"There has to be an easier way..."

All of these thoughts crossed my mind. But I was still having a tough time trying to figure out when I was supposed to go to sleep.

After spending a somewhat sleepless night, I stumbled red-eyed into work the next morning.

My appointment book was lying in my "IN" box.

As I fell to my knees in gratitude for my good fortune, the thought occurred to me, "what if I had never found it?"

May heaven forbid.

I guess I'm not smarter than that little black book.

Delta Epsilon Chi develops experts

by Denise Bartlett

Delta Epsilon Chi, formerly DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) began its professional development series last Wednesday, September 28, with a presentation by Macy's Fresno manager, Jan Shields.

Delta Epsilon Chi is a business and marketing club designed to introduce students to the world of business leadership, and to promote leadership and management skills.

Shields, a 17 year veteran with the Macy's organization, spoke on management opportunities within the corporation. Shields began her career in a work experience program through her high school, and worked her way into a position as one of six women managers in Macy's 22 California stores.

Shields is one of five business leaders scheduled to speak to Delta this semester. According to David Z. Pinuelas, President of Delta, the objective of having speakers is to "get students acquainted with people involved in upper management of local business concerns."

One objective of Delta is to develop career awareness through meeting with local business leaders such as Shields, and getting a chance to ask questions about their prospective fields.

Other objectives of Delta include leadership development through holding chapter, state and regional offices within the organization.

(According to Pinuelas, the change in name from DECA to Delta Epsilon Chi came on a national level last year.)

Competition with other Delta and DECA chapters is also akey factor in Delta. Last year, the Muscular Dystrophy Association Frisbee Toss, a civic consciousness project undertaken by the FCC chapter won third in the state overall. The club is planning to hold the event again this year on October 26, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the free speech area.

Delta members also attend conferences such as one scheduled for the weekend of October 28 during which they compete in various areas of leadership qualities and management skills.

According to Pinuelas, anyone is eligible to join Delta Epsilon Chi, whether they are a business major or not. Membership applications may be obtained through Delta advisor Dennis Schneider's classroom, B-135. The club meets Wednesday mornings from 7 a.m. until 7:50 a.m.

Senators clash on contract

By Sharon Trujillo

There was sharp exchange of words between the President of M.E.Ch.A. and an Executive Associate Student Body officer as a result of the Police Concert held Sunday, September 11.

The cleaning of the Fresno City College parking lots after the Police Concert was the responsibility of the student senate.

The ASB allotted the Programs and Activities Committee assistant chair-person, Wendoll Johnson a maximum of $200 to hire a private firm to clean the parking lots.

At the last minute, the Friday before the concert, the firm Johnson hired, Preferred Maintenance, cancelled out.

According to Johnson, Preferred Maintenance said the amount of work required to clean the parking lot would cost anywhere from $600 to $800.

To solve the problem, Johnson asked the President of M.E.Ch.A, Roy Gonzales, also an ASB senator, if the club could organize a crew to clean the parking lots after the concert.

Johnson proposed to pay the club $200. One-hundred would be divided between the clean-up crew members, and $100 would go toward the debt M.E.Ch.A. owes the ASB senate.

A Cinco de Mayo celebration sponsored by M.E.Ch.A. was rained out last semester. As a result the club incurred a debt of several thousand dollars to the ASB. Terms of a repayment of the loan included that M.E.Ch.A must give one half of all monies earned by the club to the ASB until the debt is repaid.

Gonzales turned down the proposal.

"I couldn't guarantee a clean-up crew because I could not promise I to find enough people at that late a date to complete the job," said Gonzales.

Johnson called a meeting with Lee Farley, Associate Dean of Students, and the executive officers to deal with the problem.

According to Gonzales, the meeting resulted in a verbal agreement between Gonzales and the ASB executive Vice President Mark Riley.

"We agreed that I would find three people to help clean the major walkways on campus," said Gonzales. "They would receive $3.50 an hour for as long as necessary."

Gonzales concluded that the parking lots are not included in the contract because M.E.Ch.A. would not receive the $100 that would have gone toward their debt, (as stated in the original agreement).

According to Gonzales, Riley reaffirmed that they would not have to clean the parking lots. The day of the concert arrived.

The three M.E.Ch.A. representatives began the job they were contracted to.

According to Gonzales, half-way through the concert the workers were approached by an Executive ASB officer (Gonzales refuses to name the officer). The officer said that 'Mr. Farley said since the workers were here to work, they might as well clean up the parking lots'. And if they refused to clean the parking lots, they might as well go home!"

Gonzales said, "This is not the deal Johnson and I made. I'll take them home before I allow them to clean the parking lots. If they clean the lots, we would lose the $100 for our club that Johnson proposed in the first agreement."

"The executive officer continued to say, 'Mr. Farley said...'" said Gonzales.

The battle continued as the evening rolled on.

The M.E.Ch.A. workers ended up going against the original a contract and cleaned the parking lots.

To make amends, at the ASB meeting on September 15, Johnson proposed to pay the three workers $100 to be split amongst them, and $100 to M.E.Ch.A for their help.

This Weekend and more...

By Dan Immel

That some have found themselves in a pickle deciding what kind of concert mood is befitting for the last Friday night in September is certainly true, those with definite tastes in music are having little trouble deciding between downtown or the suburbs. Out on the edge of town, more specifically the Fresno State Amphitheater, jazz-fusion rock by Santana will fill the air in a concert under the stars. Led by the guitar wizardry of Devadip Carlos Santana, the 60's-born band is best known for hits such as "Black Magic Woman" and "Everybody's Everything." Those with an affinity for jazz flavored rock with Latin spice will find

Santana the show that shouldn't have been missed. Tickets are $12.75 and can be purchased at the Student Union building and at the Amphitheater door on the CSUF campus. ....Also competing for the spotlight this Friday will be Oakland's heavy-metal pop artists Y&T. Appearing at the Warnor's Theater downtown, Y&T will probably appeal more to the younger sect therefore not affecting attendance at the Santana show. With tickets available for $10.50 at the door, Y&T will also be more attractive to those on a limited budget.... Taking exception to a notion around the newsroom, Rampage sports editor Tom Ferrall, is firm in his belief that the previous night's hoop-la will not affect attendance as the FCC Rams host Contra Costa College in Saturday night's football contest at Ratcliffe Stadium. "No way, Jose" said Ferrall, "They are going to be letting so many people in at half price just for wearing red, plus if you have an ASB card you're in for free, there is no reason for anybody not to show up." As Ferrall points out, the essence to a "great" football game "is the motivation and support that the fans have behind its' team." His argument was rational and at least at the entertainment desk, has convinced a few. Kickoff time is 7 p.m. Combined with the admissions incentives and exciting Rams football, Saturday night will not be short of entertainment.

NOW! RAM SEASON TICKETS!

For the first time this fall Fresno City College is offering a season ticket for followers of Ram football.

For only $10 you will receive free admission to all regular-season FCC home games. The Rams are facing a stiff five-game home stand this year which includes powerful Santa Monica, Contra Costa, West Hills, Merced and rival College of the Sequoias.

A look at the 1983 Fresno City College football schedule:

Date	Opponent	Place	Time	'82 Record

Big screen coming to City College

by Ken Langerman

Fresno City College students will now be able to view some of their favorite movies on campus, made possible by the media center reserving a video tape recorder for the Associated Student Body.

Student Center Chairman, Kelvin Ashford, said the movies will be shown in the senate chambers, where the activity has seemed to be successful in past semesters. Movies like "Alien" and "The Blues Brothers" have graced the television screen in the past.

"This activity has been appreciated by the students that have come into the student center to review the movies," said Ashford. "The movies have been carefully selected to fit the needs of the students."

According to Ashford, the ASB has adequate funds to begin the movie series for this semester. A list of video tape prices is now available to the student senate and there should be enough reserved seating to accommodate students wishing to view the films, he said.

ASB Legislative Vice President, Mark Riley, said the senate made a unanimous decision, approving the proposal; 16 in favor, zero nays, and zero abstentions. The movies will cost less than in the past because the ASB hopes to get a good reaction from the students.

"Movies are free to all ASB card holders," said Riley. "Non-ASB card holders will be asked to make a small donation." According to Riley, at the time of this writing, there is no specific amount as a suggested donation.

Ashford has examined the course schedule outline for the fall semester and said the most convenient time to show the movies would be on Wednesday at 10 a.m. until 12:30.

Riley contends that although there have been some schedule changes made regarding times of movie showings, some of the films FCC students can hope to see are such classics as: "The Exorcist," "First Blood," "The World According to Garp," and "Psycho II," just to name a few.

The ASB hopes to supply concessions, such as pop corn, from the contributions received while there will be receipts given to all paying students.

Home computer would lend hand to student senate

by Donna Reese

Keeping track of loans, inventory of equipment and finance is only part of what purchasing a home computer would do for the Associated Student Body.

According to Wendol Johnson, ASB senator, purchasing a home computer for the ASB would be something well worth having.

Within the next two weeks Johnson plans to make his proposal to the ASB about purchasing a home computer.

"I won't make the proposal until I know how we are doing with the budget," said Johnson. "In two weeks I will get it to run through the ASB."

The computer would be used to keep track of information on loans, emergency loans, inventory of equipment, money in trust accounts and the ASB budget as well as keep minutes of the ASB meetings said Johnson.

"We have a lot of equipment we didn't know we had," said Johnson. "We are receiving bills for storage and other things. With a computer we could keep track of the equipment we have."

"It would stop a lot of waste and save time in the office," explained Johnson.

By connecting a word processor to the computer, it can take care of typographical errors in memos and letters.

Before a computer can be purchased, consent must be given by both the ASB Senate, and Mr. Lee Farley, Dean of Students.

If the senate and Mr. Farley agree to the purchase of a computer, Johnson will recommend a computer to the ASB and have them vote on it.

"I have to put another proposal together," said Johnson.

"The proposal I have now has too many computers to choose from in it. I found out you can't give 16 people a choice of 15 computers and have them choose just one."

The money for the computer will come out of the Associate Student funds or it possibly will come out of a trust account," said Johnson.

Imagine a machine that records sights...sounds...sensations, thoughts...feelings...emotions, even your dreams and nightmares.

The motion was passed. Why did this problem ever occur in the first place?

According to ASB President Steve Steuart, it was a small miscommunication of the responsibility of roles between the executive body and the chair-person of the P/A Committee.

"Johnson was doing one thing, I was doing another... The executive body did not sit down with Johnson and explain roles," said Steuart. "The workers had to do something that didn't go along with the original contract. We gave the club the extra $100 because it seemed like the right thing to do."

The final result?

The parking lot was cleaned. M.E.Ch.A. received the $100 toward their debt. The workers received more than the original agreement had stipulated. The problem was solved.

There still, however, remains one flaw. Mr. Farley did not give the ASB executive officer permission to speak on his behalf. According to Farley, he has no recollection of issuing those statements.

Executive officers to receive pay

A proposal to pay an hourly wage to the three executive Associated Student Body officers was passed by the student senate at their meeting last Thursday, September 22.

The ASB President, Legislative Vice President and Executive Vice President will receive $3.35 an hour for a maximum of 19 hours a week if the Student Affairs office also approves of the proposal.

"By allowing this, it will be unnecessary for the Executive officers to have outside jobs. They will have more time to devote to their positions," said senator David Pinuelas. "The executive officers will do a much better job. This is favorable."

Discounts available for skiers

With the fall of a big winter this year the F.C.C. Ski Club is underway.

Deborah Shikami, head of the ski club plans on a great season with plenty of opportunities for skiers.

With the high price of ski tickets this year, the ski club offers a group rate at Sierra Summit. The club is also planning a trip with Fresno States ski club to Utah this year.

Although the club has only 12 people right now Shikami hopes on a large club. "Beginners are welcome," said Shikami.

Those individuals interested in joining may contact Shikami and the rest of the club every Wednesday in the cafeteria room AB-1.

Harriers face hectic week

Fresno City College's cross country team will be busy this coming week.

The Rams will travel to the Golden Gate Park in San Francisco for the Golden Gate Invitational on Saturday.

When the team returns, they will have a few days rest before doing battle with Kings River on October 6 at the Rams' home course in Woodward Park.

After they take on Kings River, win, lose or draw, the Rams are on the road again, this time to San Mateo for the San Mateo Invitational on Saturday, October 8.

Track team to hold meeting

There will be a meeting of prospective candidates for Fresno City College's men's and women's track and field teams on Monday, October 3.

The meeting, which will take place in two sessions at 12 noon and at 1 p.m., is scheduled to take place in room 98 of the gymnasium.

Among the topics to be discussed are eligibility for freshmen and sophomores, the tentative track schedule for 1984, requirements for priority spring registration, and the commencement of fall track classes which will begin on Oct. 4.

For additional information, see Coach Fries in the men's faculty offices of the gym.

Rams struggle at tournament

by Jim Rhodes

Some of California's strongest soccer teams faced off in the 1983 Fresno City College soccer tournament.

The Rams were pitted against Foothill College twice and were put down, 4-0 and 3-1.

The Rams continued to put up a battle but lost their next two matches. The first to Cosumnes River, 2-0, and then to Glendale, 3-1.

FCC picked up their only win of the tournament against American River, 2-1.

The Rams are 2-6-1 on the year following a grueling beginning schedule.

Foothill took the championship title and Glendale placed second in the FCC tournament.

The Rams next match will be against a local soccer club at Ratcliffe Stadium on Friday.

On October 8, FCC will compete against University of California, Davis Junior Varsity team in Davis at 12 noon.

Corsairs romp over Rams 33-8

by Mike Bledsoe

Santa Monica College's Elvin Ware scored from the one-yard line with two seconds left in the game to help lead the Corsairs to a 33-8 win over the Fresno City College football team Saturday night at Ratcliffe Stadium.

Approximately 1,000 people turned out for the Rams' first home game, a low number compared to the 13,500 seating capacity of the stadium.

The Rams seemed to be getting off to a good start when Brian Williams recovered a fumble at the Santa Monica 19-yard line. A combination of Wayne Brown-to-Anthony Mosley plays brought the ball to the 12 yard line. At this point, Matt Nilsson attempted, but was unsuccessful at, a 28 yard field goal.

The Corsairs took possession of the ball and scored the game's first touchdown seven plays later. The major play in this series was a 51 yard pass from quarterback Craig Austin to wide receiver Derwin Henderson. With nine minutes left in the first quarter, the touchdown play consisted of a six yard Austin pass to David Oster. Jon Bauroth kicked the extra point.

Santa Monica's second possession looked much like the first. Austin connected with Ken Bagley 38 yards downfield to put the Corsairs on the Rams 17 yard line. Four plays later, Bauroth booted the ball 30 yards for a field goal. This put Santa Monica at a 10-0 advantage at the end of the first quarter.

The Rams tried to narrow the Corsairs lead with a 43 yard push to Santa Monica's nine yard line. Brown attempted a touchdown pass, but the ball was intercepted by Ken Pattaway. Pattaway sprinted 64 yards to the Rams' 36 yard line.

Six plays later, Bagley grabbed an Austin pass for the Corsairs' second touchdown with 11:23 left in the half. Bauroth easily kicked the ball through the uprights for the extra point.

The first half statistics show Santa Monica's domination of the game. The Corsairs had 67 yards rushing, compared to FCC's 36. The Rams completed eight passes for 66 yards, while Santa Monica had nine successful passes for 148 yards.

The Corsairs' 215 total yards dwarfed the Rams' 102 yards.

Santa Monica moved farther ahead in the third quarter. A Keith Fields' fumble started the Corsairs down the field. Santa Monica was helped by two Ram penalties that would have given FCC the ball if they were not committed.

The first was a fifteen yard penalty for roughing the passer. The second was on a fourth down field goal attempt. The Rams were assessed with roughing the kicker, giving the Corsairs the first down. This allowed Santa Monica to get closer to the end zone, ending with a 22 yard Barouth field goal.

With less than a minute left in the third quarter, Santa Monica took possession of the ball on a Ram fumble. Two plays later, Bennie Porter latched onto an 18 yard Austin pass to put another Corsair touchdown on the scoreboard. The extra point attempt was blocked.

The Rams got on the board with 7:52 left in the game. Michael White ran one yard for the touchdown. Wayne Brown connected with Donny Garrett for the two point conversion.

The Corsairs brought the score to 33-8 with the ending touchdown and extra point kick. This first game win brings Santa Monica to 43-7-2 overall in the last five years, with three of the wins over the Rams.

The Rams will be at home again tomorrow night when they host Contra Costa College. Game time is 7 p.m.

SPORTS DESK

That gambling fever!

by Tom Ferrall

Gamblers. They love risk, excitement, anxiety, and the feeling of having some action on a game of chance or sport. They are constantly driven by the dream of hitting the "big one" and thus living a life of luxury.

Gamblers, be it either wobbly old ladies, serious old veterans, or young and daring newcomers who have the dream of retiring at the age of 25 after making a million in gambling investments, all are very interesting characters. A weekend trip to Reno last weekend proved it.

Many of those wobbly old senior citizens say to hell with the "sweet old lady" image when it comes to playing the slot machines. If you make the mistake of dropping a nickel into a machine that one of these "women" happen to be playing, you'd better brace yourself.

I've seen these dear old ladies deliver some blows with purses that would buckle the knees of Heavyweight Champion Larry Holmes. If that nickel you played brings you a jackpot, you'd better start making your funeral arrangements.

The serious, veteran gamblers show no signs of expression or emotion and always seem to be pleasant with everybody. They make the trip to Reno regularly and usually bet big bucks on sporting events such as football, instead of playing the casino games. Win, lose or draw, their expressions and attitudes remain the same, for tomorrow brings another day and another chance.

While the veteran gambler sits calmly and watches his team on television in the sports book section of the casino, the young gambler nervously paces back and forth, glancing every other second at the screen and then his betting receipt.

When his team scores, the young player jumps around as if he had scored the touchdown, while the veteran sits back and lights another cigarette. After his team is victorious, the young player shouts that his team is number one, buys himself and a few friends some drinks and makes a minor spectacle of himself, while the vet quietly collects his money and leaves.

A funny thing about gamblers is that sometimes they can be real tight wads. After throwing dollar after dollar in a slot machine, thirty of them will fight (and I mean fight) for a spot on a 14-seat free shuttle bus instead of paying the five dollars it would cost them to take a cab.

As for my luck in Reno?

Well, let me just say that I knew I was in trouble when I boarded the tour bus and discovered that I had been assigned the seat directly next to the restroom. I was the lucky holder of one of five seats that didn't recline and I also got to inhale the breathtaking aroma which would escape when ever anybody opened or closed the door to the "john".

On the blackjack tables, all the dealers I seemed to face were having the luckiest weekend of their careers. When a dealer draws on 16 the majority of the time she's supposed to bust, not get a five!

In the horseracing parlors, my luck didn't get much better. My horse in the fifth was first in the sixth and the rest of my nags are still running. Only hours after the races were completed did I learn that all the horses I had bet on had already signed contracts with the Elmers Glue Company. And when I did pick the right horse the betting on the race closed before I had a chance to make my wager.

But, like the old saying goes, "Reno wasn't built on winners".

Rampage Remembers

Eight Years Ago

The State Center Community College District board of trustees has given the go-ahead to build a new field house at Ratcliffe Stadium and employ an architect to develop a master plan for the renovation of the stadium. Planners anticipate the renovation will include replacement of all seats, construction of a new press box, widening of the track and installation of an all-weather track surface, construction of a pedestrian overpass for Blackstone Avenue, upgrading of the stadium facade, plus other improvements. . . .

The Rams are ranked number one in the state in a pre-season poll of California community college football coaches. The poll, conducted by the JC Athletic Bureau, placed two other Valley Conference schools in the top 20. College of the Sequoias is ranked 14th and Modesto JC is ranked 18th. . . .

John Toomasian, FCC history instructor, announced his intentions of running for the Board of Supervisors in the District 3 election. The election is to fill the seat vacated by Municipal Court Judge Armando Rodriguez. Toomasian is also the president of the Fresno Unified School District board. . . .

Eighteen Years Ago

Viet Nam is given credit for a 13 per cent increase in day student enrollment at Fresno City College.

"Due to the war situation many more students returned to college than normally would have," explained George C. Holstein, dean of admissions. The top day enrollment is 4,700 versus 4,154 for the fall of 1964. . . .

Johnny Mathis, internationally known singer, will present a dance and show in the FCC gymnasium. "This dance is expected to be the greatest social event ever presented at FCC," said Miss Doris Deakins, dean of women. . . .

The former hard backed Ram is being replaced by a 96-page soft cover magazine. It will show the activities of the students on the FCC campus. It will be released in September, 1966 to allow coverage of the entire school year. . . .

What do you do to prepare for a test?

Jennifer Borges, interior design - "I eat on it. I sit down with a nice big bowl of ice cream, diet coke, and lots of paper and read my notes over, and over and over."

Marcos Moreno, teaching special-ed. - "There's around four restaurants that allow you to study. I use to go to Bob's Big Boy and Carl's Jr. with my friends. When I study on my own, I just lie down in the backyard and listen to the radio."

Cye Adams, basketball - "I use to study everyday but my study habits have been poor lately. I spent all this money on these books and I haven't read one chapter yet."

Theresa Rodriguez, business - "It has to be real quiet. I go to my room and shut the doors. When I study, I study for about four or five hours straight."

Karen Tengstedt, marketing - "I drink coffee, stay up all night, and pray in the morning."

New senators on campus

Two new senators have been sworn into office by the Associated Student Body Senate.

Both senators, Deborah Thompson and Gina Rash, are new to Fresno City College.

"I was actively involved with the ASB all through junior and senior high school in my home town, San Luis Obispo. I like being involved with students and helping them with problems any way I can," said Thompson.

Thompson is majoring in child development.

Rash has previously attended Kings River Community College for the last two years and transferred to FCC this semester.

Rash plans to major in marketing research or fashion merchandising.

"I participated in many committees during high school. I like being involved," said Rash.
