Sosa collides with City College administration

by Sharon Trujillo

Apparent miscommunication between the administrative staff and an instructor may soon result in a lawsuit if the issue remains unresolved.

According to sociology instructor Dr. Luis R. Sosa, he was informed by Dean of Instruction Dr. Arthur Ellish that a letter of reprimand was put in his personal file.

Sosa said he was told by Ellish that the reprimand may lead to a suspension without pay.

"He said that if I don't conform to [the administration] idea of classroom policy, I will be fired," said Sosa.

"[The administration] asked me not to speak out on controversial issues to the students. How can I perform my job of teaching students if I am silenced by the administration," added Sosa.

According to Sosa, a meeting was called on Oct. 12 to inform him of the administration's action.

Present at the meeting were Ellish, Sosa, Dean of Social Science Jerry Stokle, and a representative of the Law Offices of Barry Bennett, an attorney for Sosa.

During the meeting two of Sosa's students, Estele Ruvalcaba and Cecilia Russ organized a group of students to demonstrate in support of Sosa outside the office of Dean Ellish. Approximately 20 to 30 students came out in support of Sosa.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Ruvalcaba and another unidentified student presented Ellish with a petition containing roughly 200 signatures in support of Sosa.

According to Russ, the petitions' language included the phrase, "We don't want free speech and academic freedom stamped out at FCC."

Russ said, "the administration has been pressuring Sosa so unfairly because they don't like the way he speaks out on important issues that concern students."

Ellish declined to provide details of the meeting citing the meeting was a confidential

Homecoming 1983

Rampage/Ken Forbes

by Denise Bartlett

This week is the annual Homecoming football game for the FCC Rams. Kickoff for the game against the Merced College Blue Devils is 7 p.m. Saturday.

There is also a dance scheduled immediately following the game in the Student Lounge located next to the book store. The dance will feature the sounds of "The Solutions," and cost is free for ASB cardholders, and $2 for non-cardholders.

There were at Rampage press time two candidates vying for the position of FCC Homecoming Queen. Ms. Bridgette Ward, sponsored by the PASU; and Ms. Carrie Bender of Delta Epsilon Chi, are the women competing for the title. This year's queen will be elected by a panel of judges selected by the ASB Senate, and the winner will be announced during the half-time of the football game. (In case of inclement weather, the announcement will be at the dance.)

The theme for this year's Homecoming parade is "Together Again" and several clubs on campus are planning to take part in the parade which will also be held during half-time.

According to the Public Information Office, this year's game is expected to be a "barnburner", so all students are urged not to miss this year's special game and Homecoming events.

Friday, November 11 is Veterans Day. There will be no issue of Rampage on that day. Happy holiday to all.

"Together Again"

Who is doing the fighting over there anyway?

by Denise Bartlett
Managing Editor, FCC Rampage

The climate of violence in the world seems to be escalating so quickly that the works of all good people seem to be forgotten.

Look at the situation in Lebanon. The United States originally sent soldiers into the war torn region for the purposes of peacekeeping.

Every day now, we hear of more and more Marines who are being dug out of the ruins of their sabotaged headquarters, or being picked off by snipers. How are they supposed to be keeping the peace when they must spend most of their time just trying to stay alive?

Now there is the new front of U.S. intervention in the Caribbean nation of Grenada. How many of our soldiers will have to die there in the name of "big brother" protectionism?

The U.S. government has placed restrictions on the press in order to keep secrecy of the goings on in Grenada. How are we as citizens supposed to know what is happening to our soldiers, and to the good name of our country if our own government refuses to allow us to gather facts?

The accidental bombing of a Grenadian hospital was not reported by U.S. news sources, but rather by a Canadian magazine. This would be fine, but it is the U.S. military which is fighting in Grenada, not Canada.

Sending in our soldiers to invade another country which is on shaky political ground, or to keep the peace in another which is located on the other side of the world may be one place in which the U.S. stands strong among our opponents; but let's not forget that it is the individual soldiers who are fighting this kind of battle, not the politicians. The lives lost in such efforts will be in vain unless those in control, as well as those who are not directly involved do not recognize the sacrifices being made by those brave individuals who give their lives in the name of peace, honor, and freedom.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

For 25 years successive Administrations in Washington have targeted the Cuban Revolution. They have conspired against it, subjected it to cruel economic warfare, attempted invasions and issued continual military threats. It is, therefore, not at all surprising that the workers sent to do peaceful construction work in the island nation of Grenada know how to fire rifles.

Indeed, the peoples of all Latin American countries would be well justified in arming and training all their citizenry to defend themselves in light of the U.S. invasion of Grenada. For the Reagan Administration has made it quite clear to all peoples who would attempt to throw off the fetters of colonialism, neo-colonialism, and oligarchic exploitation and repression that—in the words of an editorial in last Wednesday's New York Times—"only logistics, not laws or treaties, will determine the means the United States is ready to employ against them."

It is true that the Cuban advisors and workers in Grenada fought courageously and effectively defended themselves against the invaders. They upheld bravely the honor of their country and that of the people they had come to aid. The martyrdom of those who fell will be recorded in red across the pages of history. However, most credit for the valiant defense of the national rights of Grenadians goes to the people of the island themselves. Opposite the page in history where their heroism will be written will be transcribed the shame with which the warmakers in Washington have covered the name of our country.

President Ronald Reagan and his henchpeople last week surrounded the small nation, clothed the area with a dark cloak of secrecy, cutting off the eyes and ears of the world and, in the fashion of true "thugs" in the backroom of a brothel, proceeded to drench the island in blood.

No one in Grenada asked for Reagan's help. No one on the island invited him to send in the Marines. He acted without provocation in violation of the Charter of the United Nations, the Treaty of the Organization of American States and even the treaty of the recently-organized rump group that goes under the name Organization of Eastern Caribbean States of which the U.S. is not even a member.

The lame justifications offered by the Administration for its actions are only insulting, flimsy pretexts for aggression. Only the most cynical manipulators of public opinion could take them seriously and that goes for the big shot U.S. television news performers who have labored so hard to give them legitimacy. The Colombian delegate to the OAS compared the U.S. governments explanations to those used by the German Kaiser as the excuse for starting World War I and imperial Japan's justification for Pearl Harbor.

The harsh condemnation of the invasion of Grenada expressed by the governments of places like Mexico and Colombia reflect the general opinion of the governments of Latin America. Opinion among the masses of the people of the continent is even more negative and bitter. The reason for this sentiment is clear. The people

It seems to be a rather peculiar coincidence the movie "The Right Stuff" should debut at a time when this country faces some of the most perplexing situations since the conflict in Viet Nam.

"The Right Stuff," a movie about daring young men striving for perfection, excellence, and American domination of the heavens is actually a story of heroism and national pride.

But at the present time the heroics of a few men who had the right stuff decades ago is overshadowed by the heroid efforts of several hundred young men in Lebanon and Grenada.

The 229 Americans lost in the terrible tragedy in Lebanon and now the dozens dead in the Grenadian invasion, who went to these far off lands to preserve the principals of democracy, and certainly cannot be accused of not having the right stuff.

Just ask any mother who lost a son in the carnage.

Realistically, no war is good. It is strange that nations continue to look for peace through the might of the sword.

As we look back on history, we often are critical of the "barbaric mentality" of our ancestors as they bitterly fought and killed each other in the name of God.

"Holy Wars" they were called, however ridiculous the concept may seem.

Equally ridiculous are the wars that are waged for the sake of democratic freedom everywhere.

Our own country is guilty of this principal, especially during the conflict in Southeast Asia.

But what about our presence in Lebanon and Grenada? It can be argued that we have as much business there as we did in Viet Nam, which is no business at all.

And basically the argument holds water as President Reagan has not clearly defined the American public of actual intentions there. Foreign policy in Lebanon and Grenada is certainly vague.

Presently, national pride runs deep. American blood now runs thicker than water.

The tragedy in Beirut of two weeks ago actually triggered resurgence of new national pride that began with takeover of the American Embassy in Iran.

Here at home, far removed from the horrors that plague Lebanon and Grenada, rally behind our boys who risk their lives to keep world safe for democracy.

Surely we appreciate efforts of the men who brave to pioneer the voids of space, however the men who recently gave up their lives on foreign soil have replaced the former heroes and have proved to the world that they had the right stuff.

Bits-n-Pieces

College students and conventions

by Denise Bartlett

Have you ever noticed how crazy people get when they go out of town for a weekend to a place where no one knows them? People attending conventions are notorious for those kind of goings on.

Women who are usually meticulously clean and neat about their own homes turn into a "Ms. Hyde" sort of character in a rented hotel room. Linens are thrown onto the floor, trash seems to mysteriously never reach the trash can, and the room has the look of a deserted barroom after a brawl upon their departure.

Men are not excused from deviant behavior in a convention atmosphere. It is amazing how many wedding rings disappear for the weekend, and how many men have wives who "don't understand them."

At a recent convention of "civilized" college students in Los Angeles, one room became the center of a campaign for a state office for several members of that college's club. The hotel room, which also slept five members, became a distributing center for brochures and buttons; gathering place for campaign strategists; and the sight of a large cocktail party.

During the cocktail party, the beds were finally pushed up against the wall in order to accommodate more "guests".

After several complaints from rattled neighbors of the "Social gathering," the party finally wound down around 3 a.m.

While surveying the remnants of what was their room, one of the five occupants was heard to exclaim, "My God, now I know what a tornado site looks like!"

Another tenant of the room awoke the next morning to find herself face to face with a plate of guacamole dip leftover from the night before. (Have you ever seen such a sight? It's enough to turn the strongest stomach!)

Toilet paper streamers were found hanging out of their ninth story window all the way to the street below. Towels were hanging from every conceivable place, and there were enough dirty glasses sitting around to keep an army of dishwashers busy for at least a week.

The girls all pitched in and got the room up to code so that the maid would clean the room, instead of having it condemned. (The place still, however, smelled like a distillery.)

After all of the clean-up was finally accomplished, the room's occupants began to think of the plans for the coming evening.

Holding another cocktail party was not, however, the schedule of events.

Meanwhile, down the hall a piece, the male members of the club mentioned they had been holding night celebrations of their own.

Several members swayed off alcohol by the end of the weekend in question. The red-eyed faced could be seen staring glazedly off in space while they tried desperately to remember what they ended up sleeping the night before.

"I just can't remember said one sufferer, "what did I get this pair of socks? They don't belong to me."

Upon finally returning home from their wild weekend, one would think that the impulses would be satisfied, but alas, one member of the group had this to say:

"I can't wait until the next time. . ."

Yet another note. . . I still "Waiting for the story. . . The child in question is still not arrived. Maybe the sister just gained a lot of weight and doesn't want to tell anyone!

An introduction to SCCC board candidates

Area 2

F. John Pylman, Jr. — Pylman is a 59 year old high school teacher. A Bachelor of Arts, Music major graduate, Pylman is a member of various educational and music associations in the state. He feels that community colleges in this district should heed problems of residents surrounding the campuses especially during special events. He believes a constant dialogue with its neighbors would prevent in advance problems that may arise during such events. Pylman also thinks that the entire philosophy of funding for public education should be changed if California is to regain the No. 1 spot in education in the country.

William J. Smith — A 37 year old lawyer/farmer, Smith served in the Personnel Board of the SCCD, as Hearing Officer in the Fresno Unified School District and as Arbitrator for the California State Conciliation Service, among others. He feels that the major issues facing the school district are funding, educational opportunity, quality of education and collective bargaining. Smith said he will recommend that the district reconsider some of its policies especially those relating to priorities in the budget, and that alternative funding for community colleges should be explored.

Larry W. Leach — Except that he is a sheriff's officer and a nurse, no data is available regarding this candidate. We reached his wife at home by phone, but he did not return our call up to Rampage press time.

Area 3

Harry Hiraoka — Running unopposed in Area 3, Hiraoka is an incumbent SCCC trustee. He feels that the state has taken more and more control of community college's programs and will fight for more local control.

Area 5

Howard Wm. Bailey — Bailey, a 66 year old attorney, has been practicing law locally for over 20 years. He has also been involved in teaching public health and hunter's safety for the past 30 years. Bailey is concerned for the residents in the college area, and also with money issues facing the district.

David L. Creighton — Incumbent. Creighton, 46, has an educational background in social and political science, as well as in public administration. He is currently serving as SCCC Board President, and has been involved in the board for over 12 years. Creighton is concerned with the financial and governance problems facing the district.

Warren Kessler — University Professor, CSUF. 41 year old Kessler has a background in education. Kessler has been active in several community organizations, including the Fresno School Advisory Committee on Moral and Civic Reform. His major concerns for the district are on funding, class access, employee and community relations.

Albert L. Halterman — Halterman, a 40 year old Account Executive, has a background in journalism, finance and insurance. He has served as a Chairperson for the California Legislative elections, as well as other community organizations. Halterman wants to see the district place more emphasis on preparational classes which would ready students for employment or higher education.

Area 6

Alexander M. Correa — Correa, 39, is a deputy labor commissioner with the State of California. He is a graduate of FCC and CSUF with a major in Business Education. Correa is disappointed with what he calls a lack of priorities in the current board on educational and financial issues.

N. David Jefford — Jefford, 39, is a Fire Captain and paramedic. His educational background includes a degree in business from Harvard. Jefford finds the defunding of community colleges as well as the possible imposition of tuition to be of major concern.

Patrick E. "Pat" Patterson — Patterson is a Captain in the Clovis Police Department, has a background in Social Science, and is active in many Clovis area activities. He feels that most of the issues faced by the SCCC are budget related.

Candidates John L. Redgwick and Robert Whittaker were unavailable for comment by Rampage press time.

Elections will be held Tuesday, November 8, 1983.

Clubs were introduced

by Ken Langerman

The Interclub Council of Fresno City College held a Club Awareness Day on Nov. 2 at the FCC free speech area. Unfortunately, there were only eight clubs present out of 25 active clubs on campus.

Robert Bell, Interclub Council President, said most students are either familiar with some clubs or are completely unaware of any existing clubs.

"This event was sponsored by the Interclub Council which actually operates under the Associated Student Body," said Bell. "It is as if the two are separate entities but ultimately they (the council) get their power from the ASB."

According to Bell, the main purpose of the event was to inform the students of the many viable clubs at FCC. The clubs made themselves visible to students and also presented their philosophies and their reasons for existing.

"We can look at them as interest groups," Bell said. "We are hoping that students become involved and take part in student government."

The clubs present at the event were: Delta Epsilon Chi, formally DECA, The Native American Indian Student Assembly, The Shotokan Karate Club, The Ski Club, The InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, The Newman Catholic Student Association, Pan American Student Union, and MEChA.

According to the council, Club Awareness Day will enhance the relationship between students and clubs and among the clubs themselves.

Bell said that by holding the event, it would bridge the gap that now exists between students and the clubs. The interclub council meets every other Wednesday in the student senate chambers and anyone interested is invited.

'The Right Stuff': powerful

by Dan Immel

More than three decades after man first broke the sound barrier, the significance and heroics of the feat have finally drifted down from the wild blue yonder and onto the big screen.

"The Right Stuff," director-screenwriter Philip Kaufman's latest and most ambitious project, is a truly remarkable conglomeration of fine acting, a great story line, and "realistic" special effects.

Kaufman was correct to assume that America adores its national heroes no matter how much larger than life they seem.

After all, it was an American accomplishment to first travel faster than the speed of sound and thus setting the stage for the American-Soviet race for space.

In "The Right Stuff," Kaufman attempts to re-capture the mood and atmosphere of America during the sixteen-year period of 1947-1963, the height of the space race.

Kaufman's screen adaptation of Tom Wolfe's best-selling novel of the same name, is a sophisticated and complex account of the time period, continuously shifting and interlocking the settings from California, Texas, Florida, New York, and Australia.

It is an attempt by the filmmaker to offer different perspectives of these monumental events. Though the interlocking effect projects the imagery of a rapidly advancing space program it tends to become confusing.

Beginning at Murdoc, California (modernly known as Edwards Air Force Base), the film effectively re-creates the feat of the man with the rightest stuff ever, Air Force Capt. Chuck Yeager (impeccably played by playwright-actor Sam Shepard), the first man to break the sound barrier.

Shepard gives a fine performance (with technical advice from now Brig. Gen. Yeager) and establishes for the audience the criteria for men with the right stuff.

The momentum of the story is carried on through with little trouble following the trials and tribulations of the first seven American astronauts.

By employing powerful images, filled with extraordinary special effects, of the life of happy-go-lucky test pilots and daring rookie astronauts, the film's main theme begins to take on the characteristics of being effectively inspirational.

The seven Mercury astronauts, Alan Shepard (played by Scott Glenn), Gordon "Gordo" Cooper (Dennis Quaid), Virgil I. "Gus" Grissom (Fred Ward), John Glenn (Ed Harris), Scott Carpenter (Charles Frank), Wally Schirra (Lance Kenriksen), and "Deke" Slayton (Scott Paulin), are portrayed as whisky-drinking, hard working, and dedicated individuals.

The myth of the larger-than-life heroics of the first seven men to travel into space (some eventually walking on the moon), is played down on a more realistic level.

Of course, the NASA space program was not as glamorous as some Americans perceived it to be. In "The Right Stuff," we see how human nature is continuously tested by the rigors of space training.

The most noteworthy performance belongs to Shepard but also earning merits is the fine acting of Glenn, who as Alan Shepard became the first American in space.

Glenn is first to initiate the comic undertakings of the film (upon approaching a navy aircraft carrier, the pilot Shepard identifies himself only by saying: "My name is Jose Jimenez," in perfect Bill Dana character). Along with Quaid, Ward, and Paulin the stage is set for a three-ring circus atmosphere that is nicely juxtapositioned to the seriousness of the film.

Noteable is the contrasting humor and seriousness of Harris, Frank, and Henriksen.

Even the serious tone of the NASA space program and high echelon priority matters are not immune to the comic precedence set earlier by the astronauts.

Ed Harris portrays John Glenn, the first American to orbit the earth three times in "The Right Stuff".

At one point a cabinet meeting of top government officials almost turns into a Monty Python sketch complete with buffoons, wisecracks, and straight men.

"The Right Stuff," will probably prove to be one of the year's best films and certainly rates as one of the more irrational movies to come to big screen in a long time.

"The Right Stuff" is currently playing at the Fig Cineramas in two theaters.

Play dramatizes everyday lives

by Ken Langerman

It seems like no matter what country a family is from, or what type of government that country has, almost everyone can relate to the types of problems a family must go through in the course of life.

Perhaps nothing can depict a Russian family caught between wars and their love for one another as the play by Anton Chekov, "Three Sisters". The play has one more series of engagements at the Fresno City College Theater on November 4, 5, and 6.

The setting takes place in a provincial Russian city and the time is the late 1890's. The story depicts the struggle of a predominantly military Russian family caught in the middle of their government and their own private war.

At the outset of the play, Olga, played by Alice L. Jarocki, talks to her sisters reflecting on their lives 11 years ago in Moscow. Karen Liddell portrayed the youngest daughter Irina, who had an insatiable desire to get married, yet never really experienced true love.

Masha was the only sister who was married and was quite unhappy with her marriage to a second-rate school teacher who failed to fulfill the void she had in her life. The beginning act seemed to get off to a slow start but the use of the remaining characters added the element the play needed to be well received.

The sisters' only brother, Andrei Prozovov, played by Kent Peterson, was somewhat of a disappointment to his sisters since he didn't pursue the goal of becoming a scientist. Andrei did not partake in the frivolous antics of his other male acquaintances and chose not to indulge in vodka or cognac as did the soldiers who kept his company.

As the play progresses, Masha finds herself falling in love with a colonel of the Russian army named Vershinin, although fate allows them to continue on in their misery.

Vershinin, played by Ed Hygh, philosophizes about the struggle of living and the pain he has when his wife repeatedly attempts suicide. His children are left with a father who is never home and a mother who might as well not be.

Irina feels obligated to marry the Baron Tuzenbach who is basically honest and forthright but she claims to feel no love towards him. Her sister Olga convinces her that he is the right type of man to marry and that he will take care and serve her even during their most trying times.

James R. Gunn portrays

Dr. Chebutykin, an alcoholic who after abstaining for two years gets drunk since he feels so helpless in helping the family through the torment of a village burning down and the hostilities that are present in the family. Andrei later mortgages the house to pay off debts he incurred while on his more frequent gambling sprees.

Natasha, played by Justine Anabo, is Andrei's wife and her cruel and selfish disposition leaves Andrei disillusioned as to the love he has for her. Anabo adds a few phrases of French with quite an explosive portrayal of her character.

During the course of events, Masha and Vershinin talk of the life they could have together and dream of what could be rather than what they actually have. Olga tells Masha that she is foolish for even thinking of cheating on her husband despite the fact she (Masha) is clearly unhappy.

The use of symphony music adds just the right element in the scene of the fire and the final act when the sisters are again joined to look towards the future in hopes of happiness instead of misery. The make up was done quite well as well as the stage settings which gave a provincial atmosphere.

of the Americas to the south have seen the handwriting on the wall.

The peoples of the Western Hemisphere have one eye on Grenada and the other on Central America. There is a war in that region, the battlefield is Nicaragua but it could easily spread at any moment.

The Reagan Administration, with the connivance of a cowardly Congress, is financing the war. The U.S. is supervising military and intelligence operations the aim of which is the overthrow of the government of Nicaragua. A task force of ships and troops supposedly on maneuvers in the area is providing a physical shield for the foreign-directed aggression launched from Honduras and Costa Rica.

The only element missing from the Central American equation at this point is direct U.S. military intervention directed from the White House. Now the Americas have every reason to believe that Grenada is a vision of things to come.

It is important in this context to note that the alarm evoked by the U.S. invasion of Grenada extends worldwide. The Reagan Administration has launched this nation on a new round of "gunboat diplomacy." It has caused new fears on every continent and raise serious concern for the peace of the world.

Nuclear powered and nuclear equipped U.S. warships are today shunted and rerouted back and forth between Central America and the Middle East. Each place they drop anchor their guns are trained toward the shores of a sovereign nation: Grenada, Nicaragua, Lebanon. In each instance the objectives of those who sent them are the same: to be the determining factor in the politics of the targeted country, to dictate its form of government.

The guns of these boats were fired first at the Lebanon and now against the people of Grenada. There is every reason to believe that the small vulnerable island was cowardly chosen to guarantee victory in an attempt to intimidate others.

Success of the U.S. aggression against Grenada will only embolden those in our midst who uphold the use of force in international affairs and would employ gunboats as instruments of coercion throughout the world, especially Asia, Africa and Latin America. Massachusetts Senator Paul Tsongas has wondered aloud what would happen if the U.S.

attacked a country which could fight back. The people are urging Reagan to keep the gunboats booming obviously don't really care. They are willing to risk the planet.

In the name of the worldwide yearning for national liberation, freedom from foreign domination, international cooperation, the development of international law and the peace, the Reagan Administration must not be allowed to get away with the conquest of Grenada and the establishment there of a puppet regime. Real patriotism at this moment demands that we raise our voices in every forum and in every way, insisting our elected representatives do also, demanding that U.S. servicemen be rescued from the carnage in Lebanon and brought immediately home, that the troops leave Grenada now, and that the war against Nicaragua cease forthwith. This is dictated by the best interest of the people of our country and the world and indispensable in the cause of peace.

Sincerely,
Mike Rhodes

A marijuana poll, sponsored by the Student Council was conducted at FCC Nov. 9. Of the 474 surveyed, 242 admitted having smoked marijuana and 244 thought it should be legalized. A total of 61 people voted for reducing the penalty for possession from a felony to a misdemeanor.

A lack of stringed instrument players has kept FCC from forming an orchestra. According to instructor Alex Molnar, there are four students and one faculty member in his string class. Any-

The Big Brothers/Big Sisters Organization of Fresno is in need of volunteers to establish friendships with 161 boys and girls from single parent homes in Fresno County.

"We have approximately 145 boys and 16 girls in our program waiting to be matched with a big brother or big sister," said Priscilla Marzulla, Business Administration major and big sister volunteer.

Marzulla explained that being a volunteer to a child helps the child's self-esteem.

"They are special to someone," said Marzulla. "It gives them an adult they can confide in and trust."

"We are looking for mature adults, 18 years of age and older to become volunteers," said Sandra Lopez, Social Worker for Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Fresno.

The requirements for the program are that volunteers must, for one year, spend four to six hours a week on a regular basis with the child they are matched with. A person's financial or social standings are not relevant.

According to Lopez most people won't volunteer because they think they don't have the extra time to spend with a child.

"People who say they don't have the time are the people who think they have to make special time for the kids," said Lopez. "They could just include them in their regular activities."

"We are in the relationship business," said Marzulla, "not the entertainment business. Activities are secondary. Time should not be an issue. I work full time, carry nine units at school, sell jewelry, and still have a little sister!"

For a person to become a Big Brother/Big Sister volunteer he or she must go through a screening procedure that includes an orientation, application and personal interview.

"We screen our volunteers very carefully," explained Lopez. "Each volunteer must sign a police release form giving the police department permission to check for criminal records."

Orientations are held every Monday at 7:00 p.m. at the Big Brothers/Big Sisters main office at 1305 E. Olive. For more information call 268-5737.

Rams romp Pirates in rainstorm

by Mike Bledsoe

MODESTO — A first-half rainstorm did not deter the Ram football team as they slipped and slid their way to a 28-14 win over Modesto Junior College last Saturday night.

The Rams improved to 3-0 in Central Valley Conference play, and 4-3 overall with the win. The Pirates dropped to 1-1 in the CVC, and 3-2-1 overall.

The first quarter was scoreless for the teams. The Rams changed the situation with their first touchdown nine seconds into the second quarter. The score was accompanied by a Matt Nilsson kick. FCC scored their second touchdown later in the quarter.

It looked as if Modesto was going to be scoreless in the first half when the Pirates scored a touchdown with less than a minute left in the second quarter. Modesto then booted a successful extra point.

Modesto lost control of the ball two plays into the third quarter when FCC intercepted a Pirate pass. The Rams ran six plays for 32 yards to bring FCC within scoring distance. Quarterback Stanley Lambert ran two yards for the touchdown with 11:35 left in the quarter. Nilsson forced the ball through the goal posts for the conversion.

Modesto's major yardage gains in the third quarter were on five plays, totaling 110 yards. The Pirates also suffered two penalties for a loss of 20 yards, a Ram pass interception and fumble recovery. The Rams were assessed a clipping penalty, and had a pass intercepted by Modesto.

MJC received the ball at the Rams 47 yard line early in the fourth quarter. The Pirates worked the ball down to the 24-yard line when Ram Mario McArn intercepted an MJC pass in the end zone and ran 44 yards.

Running back Keith Fields shows the form that enabled him to gain 218 yards and score two touchdowns against Modesto. Based on his fine performance, Fields was named The Fresno Bee's junior college player of the week, and the CVC's player of the week. (Right) FCC's Esston Al-Uqda looks on.

Another Pirate pass was intercepted by FCC's Dmitri Booker only minutes later. The Rams pushed their way down to the 15-yard line after the interception. A 25-yard field goal was attempted, but fell short of crossbar.

MJC received the ball at their 20-yard line, and carried it 79 yards to the Rams' one-yard line. Quarterback Gerald Capps ran the ball the yard for the touchdown. Don Hubert kicked the ball through the uprights for the extra point.

The Pirates received the ball four plays after their touchdown, and moved the ball within 20 yards of the goal.

When it looked as if the Pirates were going to score, Ram Esson

Al-Uqda intercepted an MJC pass.

Two penalties moved the ball back to the Rams 10-yard line. A 33-yard Greg Harris run and a 57-yard connection to Keith Fields resulted in the Rams fourth touchdown with 1:18 left in the game. Nilsson kicked a favorable extra point.

Both teams had a well-played defense. Esson Al-Uqda, Solomon Randall and Mario McArn were instrumental in protecting the Rams' goal. Kevin Ornelas was a major character in the Pirates defense.

Rams looking for fourth straight conference win

The Fresno City College football team will go for its fourth straight Central Valley Conference win tomorrow night when they host Merced College at Ratcliffe Stadium. Game time is 7 P.M.

The Rams lead the series against the Blue Devils 3-0, having won by margins of 38-13, 38-9 and 15-2. Last year's game was decided by the defensive units. One Ram score came after a fumble recovery on the Merced five-yard line. The other was on a return of an interception for a touchdown.

Merced and FCC ran fourth and fifth defensive among CVC teams. The Blue Devils have allowed 313 yards per game while FCC has yielded 327.7. The Rams have allowed 152 points while Merced has given up 144.

Both teams are having trouble scoring. Merced averaging 17.2 points per game. Fresno is averaging 18.1.

The Rams enter the game with a perfect 3-0 CVC record and are 4-3 overall. The Blue Devils are 1-1 in the CVC, and 2-4 on the year.

Quotes to remember

by Tom Ferrall

Coaches, athletes, broadcasters, and public relations people involved in sports competition on the collegiate and professional level are constantly in the public spotlight.

This, of course, is due to the media. Since reporters are always talking with these people, humorous quotes are of great abundance in the sporting world.

Here are some examples.

Bob White, coach at Wisconsin-Oshkosh, wasn't too impressed with his team's defensive play in a 82-58 loss to St. Norbert last season. Said coach White following the game, "You could have locked us in a phone booth with Raquel Welch and we wouldn't have gotten our hands on anything."

Abe Lemons had these parting words after being fired as basketball coach of Texas two seasons ago. "I wish all my friends good luck. But to all those others, and they know who they are, all I can say is that I hope they notice the mistletoe tied to my coattails as I leave town."

Jerry Royster of the Atlanta Braves on the appetite of star teammate Dale Murphy. "I've seen him order everything on the menu except 'Thank you for dining with us.'"

San Francisco Giant skipper Frank Robinson had this beauty about his team following their 16-13 loss to San Diego in a 3½ hour 1983 opener. "If nothing else, this game proved the kind of character we have. I hoped we wouldn't have to show it so early this season."

Speaking of baseball openers, Ned Colletti, assistant public relations director of the Chicago Cubs, had this comment after last season's opener at Wrigley Field was postponed by rain. "Well, it definitely fouls up our playoff rotation."

"Baseball Bob Uecker" always seems to get the dirty end of the stick in quotes (not to mention beer commercials). Rick Sutcliffe, Cleveland Indians pitcher, made this comment after his weak hitting teammates blasted four home runs in a four game series at Boston's Fenway Park. "I'm sure even Bob Uecker had home run power in this park."

Even Uecker himself gets into the act by offering this statement on the lack of awards he received as a major league catcher. "But they did have a Bob Uecker Day Off for me once in Philly."

Art Fowler, who last June was demoted by owner George Steinbrenner as pitching coach of the New York Yankees, believes in telling it like it is. "How could I make Doyle Alexander a winner? He's a great person, he makes $1.8 million, I love him. But he can't pitch."

Jay Johnstone of the Chicago Cubs, known as one of the biggest jokers in baseball, said this about the seriousness of former Dodger teammate Steve Garvey. "Steve is the kind of guy who, for laughs, does impersonations of Tom Landry."

Even hockey players, despite all their rough behavior on the ice, have a sense of humor. Pierre Bouchard, former defenseman for Montreal and Washington, asked if he could ever make it back to the National Hockey League. "Only if I learn to play the organ."

Vanderbilt basketball coach C.M. Newton explains why he always takes the rear seat on the team's charter flights. "I never heard of a plane that backed into a mountain."

Foreign athletes also get into the practice of delivering snappy quotes. Peter Koesch, a native of Kenya who is a distance runner for Washington State, on the training conditions in his homeland. "It's a jungle out there."

Alumni hold game to aid Toomasian's hoop program

by Tom Ferrall

In an effort to help the Fresno City College basketball program financially, and to repay "born again" coach John Toomasian for all of his generosity, former players of the coach will play an alumni basketball game on Saturday, Nov. 12, in the FCC gym.

Steve Natsues, who is currently the hoop coach at Clovis West High School, said alumni from 1967 and on will be participating in the game.

At 6 p.m. coach Toomasian will introduce his new team, and the squad will play a controlled scrimmage. At 7 p.m. the alumni will begin their contest.

Natsues, along with the other former players, feel that FCC and Toomasian were both very good to them, and this is their way of giving something back.

"We feel that coach Toomasian has done so much for us in both the sports and educational aspects of our lives, that this is the least we can do to help him and the program out," said Natsues.

Admission to the pre-game scrimmage and alumni game is $2.00 for adults, $1.50 for students with an ID card, and 75 cents for elementary students.

The brand of basketball is definitely going to be top notch considering the players participating. Frank Williams, who was the team and conference most valuable player during the 1972-73 season averaging 25.4 points a game, returns to the FCC gym.

Other alumni scheduled to participate are: Natsues brother Tim (who led the state in scoring in 1968 and was all-conference), Billy Hicks, John Glavinovich (went on to play at UC Irvine), Steve Cleveland (also currently coaching at Clovis West), Greg Gioza (went on to play at Humboldt State), Alan Caton, Sammy Taylor (went on to play at Cal Poly), Gary Jiannoni, Bill Alan, Eddie Adams (went on to play at Fresno State, and averaged 23.7 points a game in his sophomore season at FCC, and grabbed 328 rebounds in his two years as a Ram), and Steve Johnston.

FCC hopes for victory

The FCC Rams will try to retain their title Saturday as the Central Valley Cross Country Champions.

The championships start at 11:00 with the women running their 5,000 meter race. The men will take off on their four-mile course at 11:45.

The College of Sequoias' Giants are the favored team, based on their victory over the Rams last Friday.

The Giants finished the season 5-0 and the Rams were close behind with a record of 4-1.

Standouts for the top position are FCC's Leroy Rivera, Porterville's Mandla Kunene, Modesto's Dwight Smith and COS's Robert Taylor.

David Perez and Gabe Torres are expected to help FCC in their attempt.

Probable leaders in the women's race will be Tammy Anderson from Modesto, Jill Canales of COS, and FCC's Rosa Medina.

The championship is to be held at Woodward Park. Coach Fries expects the races to be close but the park is the Rams' home course.

Trustees vote to cut classes

The State Center Community College District Board of Trustees voted last Tuesday, Nov. 1, to cut the number of students admitted to the Fresno City College licensed vocational nurses program.

The current program admits 25 students each semester in the thru-semester LVN course. There are presently 75 students enrolled in the program, but they will not be affected by the reduction plan.

The proposal as approved, calls for the admission of 25 students every thru-semester period. Thus the next 25 participants will be admitted only after the previous class has completed the three semesters required for the LVN course.

The new policy will be effective starting next spring.

The Board's action was spurred by the declining employment opportunities for LVN graduates in the Fresno area. Moreover, elimination of six part-time teachers and re-assignment of two full-time instructors will mean a $40,000 annual savings for FCC.

Financial aid is still available

Students returning to school this fall may now apply for private financial aid, according to The Scholarship Bank.

According to Steve Danz, director of the nation-wide service, private financial aid is the most often overlooked source of student aid, yet accounts for nearly 500 million dollars, or one-quarter of all scholarship money available.

The Scholarship Bank is the largest private search firm in the country and works with college financial aid offices to bring private scholarships to student applicants.

A student sends a stamped self addressed envelope to the bank at 10100 Santa Monica #2600, Los Angeles, CA. 90067 and receives a questionnaire. The form is then sent back to the bank with a check for $35 or $45 depending on how many sources the students wants (25 or up to 75).

The package, which is then sent to the student, gives the name, type of award, eligibility factors, and address of the source. Or, the student can order the application for that particular source directly from the bank after receiving the print-out. According to the director, most students find about 15 sources they actually write to.

Private financial aid is usually not need based, but involves such factors as the student's desired major and occupational goal, area of the country they wish to work in, religion, special interests and hobbies and parents' background. A number of new scholarships this year have been opened for business, computer, health and law students, for a total of about 25,000 scholarships.

Opportunity to study in Scandinavia

Scandinavian Seminar announces its 1984-85 College Year in Scandinavia program. Now in its 35th year, this unique learning opportunity in Denmark, Finland, Norway, or Sweden is open to college students, graduates, and other adults (over 18) who want to study in a Scandinavian country, learn its language, and become part of another culture. Applications are accepted until April 1984 on a first-come-first-considered basis.

After orientation in Denmark and a 3-week intensive language course, often followed by a family stay, students are placed individually at Scandinavian Folk Schools or other specialized institutions, where they live and study with Scandinavians of diverse backgrounds. The Folk Schools are small, residential educational communities intended mainly for young adults. Both historically and socially, these schools have played an important part in the development of the Scandinavian countries. Midway through the academic year, all College Year in Scandinavia students and staff meet in the mountains of Norway to discuss first semester studies and experiences. Toward the end of the year there is a similar meeting in Finland for all participants, to discuss Scandinavia as a cultural region and to sum up the year.

Because the Scandinavian countries are small, open, and accessible, the year provides an unusual opportunity for the student who wishes to explore his or her particular field of interest by doing an independent study project. On the basis of a detailed written evaluation of their work, college students may receive academic credit for their year either through their home academic institution or through the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, by pre-arrangement.

The fee, covering tuition, room, board and all course-connected travels in Scandinavia, is $6,500. Some financial aid in the form of interest-free loans and supplementary grants is available for students who can demonstrate their need.

For further information, on this or other intercultural, educational programs sponsored by Scandinavian Seminar, please write to:

Veterans Club

The first meeting of the Veteran's Club was held Tuesday, the first of November. There will be a Veteran's Club Meeting held every two weeks at 4 p.m. The meetings will be held in the ASB Senate Chambers.

The goals of the Veteran's Club are social. It is a way for more Vets to meet each other and their families, and to get them more involved with school social activities.

The club was once active on campus, but was discontinued when the executive officers decided that it was becoming too politically involved.

ASB Senate member Mark Riley and Kenneth Wells realized the Vets on campus weren't being represented, so last year they decided to restart the club.
