

Red riding the wave of reality

By Marie Andrade
Staff writer

Sara Red, coordinator of the Women's Studies Program at Fresno City College, was recently honored as a finalist in the Fresno Business and Professional Woman of the Year Award.

The Women's Studies program began here as one class, an off-shoot of sociology. The program has expanded to offer nine different courses with an associate of arts degree in Women's Studies.

Red started at FCC in 1972 to further her education. Married, with a daughter, she discovered she loved being in school, loved learning and expanding her horizons.

"It was great," she said, "to find others were interested in my opinion...in what I thought..."

Putting her education first, her marriage "went on the rocks" and she became a single parent.

"Money, or rather the lack of it, was my biggest obstacle getting through those years," she said.

However, she persevered and received her bachelor of arts degree from California State University, Fresno in 1977. She received much encouragement and help from her mentors at CSUF. She discovered she loved teaching and has taught at CSUF for ten years.

Sara Red a leading woman of the 80's.

In 1983 Red was asked to teach a class of Women's Studies at CSUF. "Never having taken the class," she said. "I was teaching it...and hoping the students wouldn't ask too many questions. I learned right along with them."

That year she also taught the only section of Women's Studies at FCC. Taking surveys of her students to find what changes in curriculum were needed, she wrote a proposal for those changes and they were accepted in 1988.

Red believes it is important to know the role of women in history. "For too long," she said, "women's roles have been based on the male role model. Because women are different, we are concentrating now on a woman's perspective as role models."

Definitely a "Woman of the 80's," she has been a member of the Marjorie Mason Advisory Committee for several years and is currently serving as vice-chairperson.

As busy as she is, she takes time for her family. "Every night my daughter and I have 'tuck-in time,'" she said. "We talk about the days' happenings and whatever else she wants to talk about. It's our special time."

"I also take time for myself. Recently we moved

Wright to direct the 'New Wrinkles of '89'

By Gurdeep Sihota
Staff writer

The Sears Foundation recently issued a grant for $7,000 to the Fresno City College Theatre Department.

FCC was one of three colleges in the nation to receive the funds.

"The purpose of the grant," said Tom Wright, theatre arts instructor, "is to put together a professional-quality senior citizens' variety show."

All the performers for the show, entitled "The New Wrinkles of 1989," are 55 or older.

The musical will feature performances such as dancing, singing, a chorus line and comedy routine.

The show is scheduled to open during the last week of May and continue through the first week of June, 1989. Auditions will be held in early March.

"The New Wrinkles of 1989" will be similar to "Geritol Frolics," a variety show that took place in Minnesota.

Wright, who is directing "The New Wrinkles of 1989," attended the show in Minnesota.

"I think it was the most exciting and fun show that I ever saw," said Wright. "It's incredible to see the energy they [senior citizens] put in a show."

Wright highlighted the audience's enthusiasm when he described a 50-year old man who came running across the lobby to greet his 81-year old mother who was in the show and yelled, "That's the way, Mom!"

Lack of interest endangers escorts

By Gurdeep Sihota
Staff writer

A lack of student interest might result in the termination of the Fresno City College Escort Service, said FCC Police Chief Kenneth Shrum.

"There seems to be just a handful of people interested in the service," said Shrum.

"We had a few students say they would like an escort at night," explained Shrum. "So we decided to try it."

The program, which was implemented last January, has been less than successful because people have been looking out for themselves, according to the campus police chief.

"Most people team up with each other at night," explained Shrum. "So there isn't a very big demand for the service."

Because there are no student volunteers to help escort, cadets from the police unit are used.

"It's a big drain on the cadet unit," said Shrum. "We dispatch two escort officers a night."

Students can request an escort by calling 442-8201, or by using the emergency phones located at various spots on campus.

Students can also request a permanent escort schedule.

The service, similar to the one at California State University, Fresno, is offered from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. weeknights.

Shrum encourages students to volunteer as escorts. Anyone interested in the program can contact the campus police office at 442-8201.

FCC's student newspaper receives recognition

The Rampage received a total of four awards from the Journalism Association of Community Colleges, Northern Section - California, at the organization's annual meeting at Sacramento City College on October 29.

The Rampage received first place in the investigative news category for Kristin Martin's story on the rising Fresno City College bookstore prices in comparison to the prices for the same books at the California State University, Fresno's bookstore.

In the front page layout, full-size category, The Rampage took second place.

"Winning in this category was a real achievement," said Keith Hiler, editor-in-chief. "We had some tough competition. We won because we weren't afraid to use the large photos and graphics to enhance them in an unusual way," said Hiler.

"Bold graphics and photos which are more than a repetition of lead paragraphs" and "A paper trying to be lively and informative," was how the judges described the full-size front page layout entry.

Third place in the sports feature photo category went to Photo Editor D. K. Fultz. "Creative, good eye for reflection," evaluated the judges on Fultz's entries.

In the news story category, Derrick DePledge's contribution won fourth place.

Finalists compete for royal crown

By Marie Andrade

Seven finalists were selected in mid-October as Cal Bowl princesses by a panel of judges from the business community.

"The Cal Bowl Queen and her court have been selected from Fresno City College for the past four years," said Steve Wakefield, vice-president of Cal Bowl, and in charge of the coronation. "This is because Fresno City College is not part of Cal Bowl, and therefore, it is impartial."

The Cal Bowl football game is played between the winners of the Big West Conference and the Mid-American Conference.

The Queen and her Court will act as hostesses during Cal Bowl Week, December 4 through 11, with the Cal Bowl game played on Saturday, December 10. Proceeds from the game will be donated to Valley Children's Hospital.

A coronation banquet will be held at the Centre Plaza Holiday Inn on November 11. The top three finalists will be announced and the queen will be crowned.

The seven finalists are: Vickie Kobacevich, Denise Bryant, Maria Iriarte, Denise Presepe, Ann Coffee, Patti Anderson, and Staycee Glidden.

The struggle for Senatorial office

By Keith Hiler
Editor-in-chief

What do you know about Leo McCarthy or Pete Wilson? Which one is the democrat and which one is the republican? What office are they running for? Both try to come across as the only one you should vote for.... in their 60 second TV commercials. But what about the issues? In this day of a candidate's image being more important than their track record, you are less likely to find out what they really stand for.

McCarthy is the Democratic, and Wilson is the Republican Senatorial candidates for California. They agree on four out of the ten key issues that face the voting populace today. What are those ten key issues? On which issues do they agree? On which issues do they disagree?

McCarthy does not support an increased level of funding for the Strategic Defense Initiative, Wilson does.

McCarthy supports the end of testing nuclear weapons, Wilson wants continued testing.

McCarthy is against sending military aid to the Nicaraguan contras, Wilson is for sending aid.

McCarthy and Wilson are both for a mandatory seven day waiting period and criminal background check for gun purchases.

Both are in agreement on the elimination of contributions to congressional candidates by political action committees.

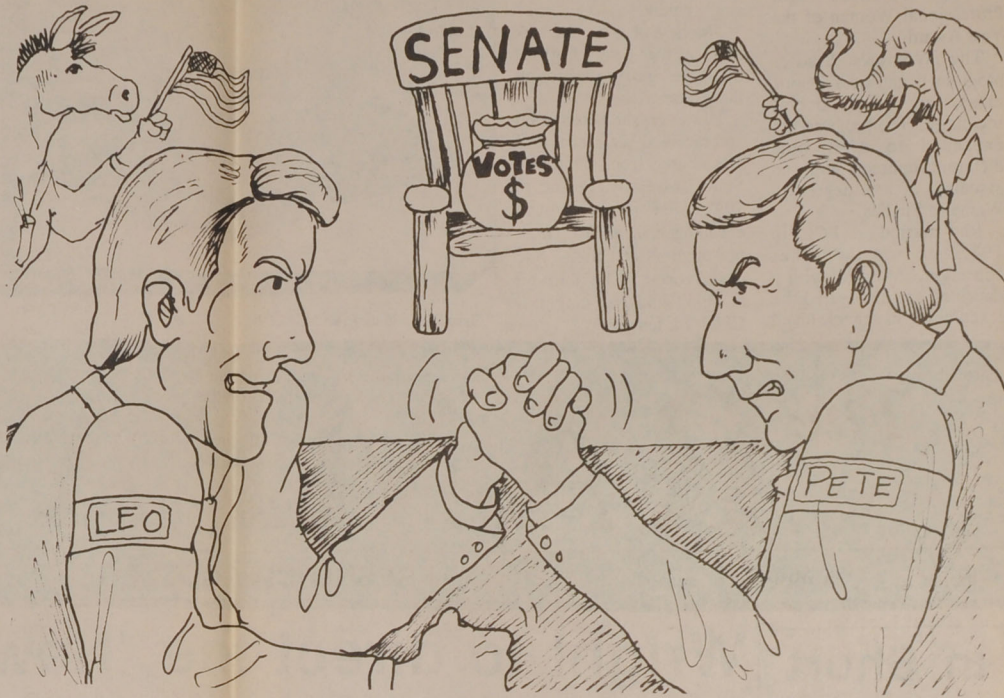

McCarthy supports legislation guaranteeing basic health insurance to all Americans, Wilson does not.

McCarthy is for the Family and Medical Leave Act, which would provide unpaid job-guaranteed parental and sick leave, Wilson is against the act.

A constitutional amendment prohibiting abortion is opposed by both candidates.

Legislation to reduce acid rain by cutting sulfur dioxide emissions by at least ten million tons per year is supported by both candidates.

Where do you stand on these issues? Do you think about these key problems or are you like most Americans polled, stating it's more important for the candidate of their choose to be good looking than be an intelligent, well informed lawmaker?

It should be interesting to see where the power will end up at the end of tomorrow's election. According to most polls, Bush/Quayle will occupy the oval office for the next four years. But what about the the Senate and the House of Representatives? The same polls are predicting a democratic gain in both houses. Where will this leave Bush and Quayle? It would not be surprising for Bush and Quayle to wake up one cold democratic January morning out in the cold. Your next question might be, "Why?" And a good question it would be.

Now stop and think about the TV commercials you have seen from the start of this campaign. It sure seems like there has been a lot of negative campaigning on the part of the republican party. Of course the democrats are not likely to forgive and forget this tactic, as Bush will very well see.

This will most assuredly be the shortest "Honeymoon, (a period when Congress will give an incoming president his way)" in recent political history. This short grace period will be prove you can win the battle and still lose the war. After all "the Great Communicator" was Reagan, not Bush.

Student Forum

Dear editor,

What's the deal? In your last issue of the Rampage, I happened to come across something that offended me. Being a strong believer in the occult and astrology, I found "Horrorscopes" an insult to my intelligence and my religious beliefs. I would think that a college newspaper would be responsible enough to think that a college newspaper would be responsible enough to print the "Real McCoy," and not a ridiculous parody. In the future I would hope that Venus (what a joke) Firehorse and Blue (who are you) Monkey get their stars aligned.

Signed,
Naomi Zamora

Dear editor,

I would like to respond to some very troubling statements which Mr. Todd Hinson made in a letter to the editor last week. In Mr. Hinson's letter, he stated that people who feel the two major presidential candidates this year are worthless should consider moving to another country. What a typical Republican remark! I thought America was a democracy. A democracy usually includes more than two opinions! I have my doubts, but I sure hope Bush doesn't feel the same way as Mr. Hinson.

Also, when someone writes a letter to the editor, they should learn how to spell first. I find it very ironic that Mr. Hinson misspelled "dummy," along with three other words. In any event, I do not wish to attack you personally, Todd--unlike what your presidential choice (Bush/Quayle) seems to enjoy doing to Dukakis/Bentsen. In conclusion, writing this editorial reminds me of two very scary words: "President Quayle."

Dallas Blanchard

Dear editor,

Although I respect Todd's right to make a political statement, I would certainly find it more credible if he spent the time to check his spelling and didn't subject us to accusations, name-calling, and assumptions. Hopefully, the election results will be eye-opening to him.

Patti Anderson

Dear editor,

Led by the conservative charge of Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush in 1980, the Bulls stormed the government and Wall Street by surprise, ushering in the biggest Bull Market ever seen by Corporate America. These beasts roamed freely in pursuit of profit at any expense so long as big business and the private sector were served. When the Great Crash of October 19, 1987 brought it to an end, we were left with a battlefield littered with every vestige [sic] of western Democratic principal once held sacrosanct and above reproach.

Republicans George Bush and Dan Quayle now want to resurrect the beast again by waving the red flag of 'liberalism,' equating it to the hated hue of McCarthy's 1946 attack on 'communism'. And, if history is any guide, the moral corruption that had its genesis in the bipartisan Vietnam war, grew into the Nixon-Watergate Years, and burst into full-flower with the Reagan-Bush/Iran-Contra/George Meese Administration, will now ripen into the seasoned maturity of sanctioned institutional corruption at the helm of Republican George Bush, et. al. Now, in the midst of this unholy Bear Market, the Bulls are gathering steam.

Sincerely,
Douglas J. Anderson

A refreshing breath of photographic art

By Earl Scialabba
Contributing writer

The Spectrum Gallery is a local landmark-the only place in this wide, empty valley where you will find a professional photographers' gallery. What in larger cities is accepted as highbrow art, is little known in Fresno. Gallery members and supporters, one-third of whom have a link to Fresno City College, hope to change that.

The Gallery has its roots in the FCC photography department. Instructors in the department include Steve Dzerigian and Ray Arth. To explain why FCC photography is connected to the Gallery, go back to the founding of the gallery, circa 1979. Steve Dzerigian circulated letters among those who attended "photosynthesis parties," as he called them. The response was vigorous, and the Central California Photographers' Guild was born. This conception produced the Spectrum Gallery as soon as space could be found. This gallery, which also provides a darkroom, is actually only the tip of the iceberg, as far as the Guild is concerned. It has a monthly program centering on some aspect of photography, and lectures on assorted topics, as well as portraiture, photojournalism, and fine art photography. Guest lecturers include some of the state's best known photographers, such as Ted Orland, Ellen Land-Weber, and Judy Dater. Currently on display are four of Steve Dzerigian's prints. Also displayed are three prints by Gerard Gendron, an FCC student who is a new member of the guild. What Gendron enjoys about photography is this: "It is a way of expressing feelings and showing what I see through the eyes of the camera. Indeed, it is also exciting to have those visions displayed and have people enjoy them." He feels the best images are more intuitive, a shot that is calculated, and planned. However, he is quick to add that some of his best shots were stumbled upon, a sort of spontaneous inspiration. He feels FCC has a tremendous program. It is diversified, and Ray Arth and Steve Dzerigian are two of its greatest assets, offering insight on portraiture, fine art, and and photography's commercial aspects. Gendron and Dzerigian are both good examples of the connection between FCC and the Spectrum Gallery. Photography as a career is one of Gendron's goals, and the opportunity to exploit his love of the outdoors through photography is an extra advantage. This shows in his prints. Ansel Adams was as much an inspiration to Gendron as he was to other aspiring fine art photographers. Gendron says he is always learning. What does it take to be serious about photography? Enough to be shown at a gallery? First of all, money. It's a heavy investment, with equipment at the top of the list. A great deal of time is also required, time to, say, drive a hundred miles to take a picture of something. Perhaps a sunset at Yosemite or the surf at Carmel. Also, you have to pour a lot of your soul into it, to give up hours of your life just to capture one moment, one brief moment before it becomes part of the unreachable past. Photography is a slice of time preserved for art. To be a member of the Central California Photographers Guild requires a $25 initiation fee, and $15 monthly dues. Members also take turns as hosts of gallery showings. On the night of the gallery show of October 23, member Dennis Keplinger, also a former FCC student, acted as host, explaining the prints to gallery visitors. Currently 41 members belong to the guild. There will be a print drawing Sunday, November 20, at 7:30 p.m. at the Spectrum Gallery at 1306 North Wishon. Tickets are $35. Winners of the drawing will receive their choice of one print. The public is invited.

Geology club begins digging for funds

By Stephane Terronez
Contributing writer

The Fresno City College Geology Club will begin fundraising this year to buy field equipment for the club and the Geology Department. Club President Kat Shackelton says the group's ultimate goal is to acquire a trailer apart from the science building, and stock it with items necessary for science excursions.

The club is beginning its first official year on the FCC campus, according to its advisor Kermit Gustafson, a geology instructor. He described club proceedings as "a combination of business meetings and social gatherings."

The main purpose of the club is "to get people together who are interested in geology and other earth sciences," said Shackelton. She encourages anyone with even a slight interest in nature or natural phenomenon, such as floods or volcanos, to join. A recent field trip to the San Gabriel Fault was a highlight for those with an interest in earthquakes. Due to "extenuating circumstances," field trips scheduled for the remainder of the semester have been cancelled. Trips for the spring semester have not yet been scheduled. The club will occasionally host guest speakers. "We're trying to get the Roger's Diamond people to give us a presentation on diamonds," said Shackelton. Presently, all speaking engagements are tentative. Club activity will not be limited to the realms of FCC, members will be working with the California State University, Fresno Geology Club on joint projects. To further expand the horizons of the club, the group plans to involve itself with the activities of the Fresno Gem and Mineral Society, an association of professional geologists. In addition to acquiring equipment, the club plans to participate in civic and community activities. Said Shackelton, "We are interested in things the whole community can get involved in."

Membership is open to all FCC students regardless of major. Many members are not in science-related majors, but like Shackelton, are humanities majors. Individuals in the community are also invited to join the club as associate members. The Geology Club plans to meet about twice a week. For more information, contact Kermit Gustafson in the Geology Department or Kat Shackelton at 251- 3352. Other members of the group which may be of assistance are: Larry Kilburn, vice-president; Sandy Baker, secretary; Kris Lynn, treasurer; and Bye Massey, program director.

College Republicans gear up for vote

By Stephanie Terronez
Contributing writer

With one day remaining until the 1988 presidential election, many groups are busy organizing for their favorite campaign. The newly formed club "Fresno City College Republicans for America's Future" is in high gear for the event also. "Our members will be working at the Republican Headquarters of Fresno County, participating in precinct walks, the phone bank, registering voters, and in GOTV (Get Out The Vote) during election week," said Armen Devejian, the club's president.

The organization, which has approximately 40 members at present, is open to all student regardless of political affiliation. The purpose of the club is "to build political awareness among college students, and to promote the study and appreciation of the United States, its government, and its democratic political system," said Devejian. Meetings are slated for Tuesdays and Thursdays. Meeting times will later be posted. For more information, contact the group's advisor, Vahack Haroutunian, in the math department, or call 297-2997.

Wrestlers win more

The Ram grapplers took the team title at the Sierra College Invitational meet in Rocklin, CA.

Adrian Castro at 126 pounds and Robert Zapata at 177 pounds both finished first in their respective divisions.

The Rams had 48 points, three ahead of second place Bakersfield College.

With the 31-10 win against Sacramento City College last Wednesday evening, Coach Musick's wrestlers ran their dual meet record to 9-1.

Robert Zapata continued his winning ways by beating Clint Birch 9-1 in the 177 pound class. Zapata's record now stands at 22-0.

In the heavyweight division, Ricky Cuellar of FCC pinned Jason Bartley at 4:06 of the second period.

Soccer teams win/tie

The Women's soccer team had a close call in Santa Rosa where they eked out a 1-1 tie to maintain first place in the Camino Norte conference.

Then last Thursday another win was added to the column when they rolled over American River 5-0.

Leslie Carsaro and Shannon Fultz both scored twice and Sandy Forker scored on a penalty kick.

The lady's record is 10-0-1 in conference play and 14-0-3 overall.

The last league game of the season will be played this Wednesday, Nov. 9 at 3pm at Ratcliffe Stadium against Foothill College. If they win, it will mean the conference title and an automatic berth in the finals against a Southern California team.

The men's soccer team duplicated the women by playing to a 1-1 tie with Santa Rosa and then shut out Modesto Junior College 8-0.

The men's league record is 4-1-2 and they will play league leader American River (6-0) tomorrow in Sacramento.

Volleyball so-so

The lady's volleyball team defeated Alan Hancock College in three straight sets and then lost to College of the Sequoias 15-13, 15-7, 12-15 and 15-7.

The Coast Valley Conference record of the lady Rams is 3-2.

Cross Country Championships

The Coast Valley Championships were held at Woodward Park last Saturday but the results were not known at press time.

Her life has new dimensions; she has married a professor at CSUF. "He's my partner, my best friend and my buddy," she said.

She may have learned the secret of balancing home, family and career, she separates her family life from her professional life.

"I've learned to say 'NO' to a lot of things. My family and career are important to me, as well as being time consuming, and outside of the Mason Center, that's all I have time to do," she said.

One of her goals is to teach full-time at FCC. She's putting together a Women's Studies file that she plans to develop into a resource center for students.

"If you have a dream, stick to it," is her advice to students who reenter college to pursue a fuller life.

A night of delight

Ratcliffe Stadium was full of delight during the football game against Alan Hancock College on October 29.

Fresno City College student, Linda Gilmer, was crowned homecoming queen at halftime in front of approximately 500 people. The other highlight of the evening was the Rams victory over the Bulldogs 27-3.

Sean Sanchez, Associated Student Body Senator was crowned as the king. The title of prince and princess was given to Oscar Segura and Patti Anderson, both ASB senators.

"HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS."

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. Then, under the New GI Bill, I'm getting another $5,000 for tuition and books.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back—up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000—or more—for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

THE GUARD CAN HELP PUT YOU THROUGH COLLEGE, TOO. SEE YOUR LOCAL RECRUITER FOR DETAILS, CALL TOLL-FREE 800-638-7600,* OR MAIL THIS COUPON.
