FRESNO CITY COLLEGE

February 29, 1988

In Short

Women's Month

March is "Women's History Month" and FCC's Women's Studies Department intends to recognize the event.

To date the People Speaking Theatre is scheduled to perform on March 21.

It is scheduled to perform a production entitled "With Vision, Convictions and a Voice."

In the performance Mary McLeod Bethune, educator and one of the most influential black leaders in the country for over 30 years, encounters Mary Harris "Mother" Jones, fearless Irish immigrant labor organizer and foe of child labor practices.

Additional events are to be announced.

Schedules

Beginning March first, the 1988 fall semester class schedule will be available. The new schedule will have a newspaper tabloid-size format and will include photographs and information on key campus personnel and programs.

Best of all, it's free!

Dr. Ernest Leach, president of Fresno City College, said regarding the change, "It is our intention to make many more people aware of our offerings. The new class schedule is FCC's presentation to the community so we're making it more accessible to everyone."

During the first week of March schedules will begin to be distributed on campus, mailed to students who have attended FCC the two previous semesters and a supply for local high schools will also be made. The schedules will also be provided for major employers in the community.

Graduation Deadline

The application deadline for graduation or certificate of completion for the spring 1988 semester has been extended to March 11. Students who have already received an evaluation and who have been continuously enrolled, need not apply.

Creative Workshop

Jon Pearson, a Los Angeles based artist will hold a series of workshops called "Creative Thinking and Writing Through Drawing," the first of which will be Monday, Feb. 29 in the Art-Home Economics Building from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 1-3 p.m.

On Tuesday, March 1, Pearson will present his workshop to students at Manchester School starting at 9:30 a.m. and continuing all day.

The workshop, sponsored by FCC and Manchester School, is open to the public.

"Health and Exercise"

Gloria Crovelle of Michelle's Fitness will be guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the American Diabetes Association, to be held Tuesday at the Red Apple Cafe located at 117 W. Shaw Avenue in Clovis.

A no host dinner at 6 p.m. will be followed by Crovelle's presentation of "Health and Exercise." A question and answer session follows. The public is opened.

Scholarship

Scholarship applications for Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo for 1988-1989, are now available in the Transfer Center, second floor of the Student Services Building. Application deadline for Cal Poly is March 1.

"Legacy for the future"

By Deborah Miller and Russell Easley
Staff writers

The Fresno City College sign was revealed along with the entombment of one of three time capsules last Friday to commemorate Community College Month. The sign was originally planned to be revealed during the Diamond Jubilee in 1985 but was delayed until November 1987.

Directly in front of the sign, on the corner of Van Ness and McKinley, is a tomb that will house three time capsules until 2010.

"The cement was already being laid for the FCC sign, so he (David Jimenez, public information officer) thought it would be a good idea to go ahead and construct the time capsule," said ASB President Richard Montanez. "We're hoping it (the capsule) will leave a legacy for the future generations. We want them to see how things have changed when they open it."

The three capsules will contain essays from students, videos from the ASB and local television stations, newspapers containing important events, and other miscellaneous items such as letters and photos, said Montanez.

Late items for the capsules will be accepted up to the first week of March according to Montanez.

The remaining two capsules will be on March 11.

Fresno City College is the first community college in California to undertake the task of providing a time capsule for future generations.

Four new senators were sworn in to the Associated Student Body on February 11 to replace the four vacant seats from last fall.

The new senators are Sonja Burris, psychology major, Jeff Delarm, biology genetics major, Donna Ramirez, liberal arts major, and Colleen Sivas, psychology major. All are first-time ASB members.

In addition, Gary Epley was reconfirmed by the senate Thursday as election commissioner.

Among the changes proposed by Epley in the ASB By-Laws is the prohibition of candidate loitering and campaigning in the area of open polling booths.

"In the past it seems that student voters have been intimidated by over-anxious candidates hovering over them in the polling booths," said ASB president Richard Montanez.

Epley also proposes the elimination of campaign propaganda in or around the polling booth area. In the past, campaign materials were posted as near as 25 feet of the booths.

Basketball fiasco

By Russell Easley
Staff writer

The Fresno City College basketball teams had to forfeit a total of 15 games this season, because the teams used ineligible players.

The men's basketball team had to forfeit the four wins it accumulated in the first 12 games because freshman guard Charlie Ross was an ineligible player, according to Dr. Emory Luck basketball coach and director of athletics.

Ross transferred to Cal Poly, Pomona after the first week when he was offered a scholarship, said Coach Luck. "He came back to FCC after the fourth week."

According to Dr. Ward Lasher, associate dean of students, admissions and records, Ross couldn't play for one year after attending a four-year university. Coach Luck said that doesn't apply because he didn't play basketball at the university. The main problem was Ross reentered instead of being reinstated.

"We always thought he was reinstated," said Coach Luck. If he had been reinstated he could have played basketball according to Coach Luck, even after the fourth week.

"He's a great basketball player," said Coach Luck. "Do you think that I would let him go? They (Cal Poly) took him away from us."

Someone should do something to Pomona (Cal Poly)! They weren't hurt in any way."

"The ineligibility was discovered by me in about the third week of December," he said. "It's my job to report when a student is or isn't eligible to play." Ross didn't play in any games after he was found ineligible according to both Dr. Lasher and Coach Luck.

The declaration of ineligibility changed the men's team from 11-20 to 7-24. It also changed Southern Idaho's standings from one loss against FCC to undefeated. Coach Luck said "all of a sudden they were undefeated."

The women's basketball team had to forfeit 11 games because sophomore forward Sheila Vercher didn't have a total of 24 units completed, said Dr. Lasher.

The declaration of ineligibility brought the women's team from 16-14 to 5-25.

To play, a player must have a 2.0 grade point average and complete 24 units in the last two semesters, according to Dr. Lasher.

Coach Carol Kadingo refused to comment, saying "there's an error in the paper (meaning the Fresno Bee, which ran a story on a similar subject last week) and I'm not at liberty to say until after we (the coaches) have a meeting."

Dr. Lasher said he knew about the ineligibility problem at the beginning of the season, in December, but said "Coach Kadingo didn't see the report" that was given to the State Center Community College District.

A similar incident occurred in 1984 when FCC basketball player, Leonard Brown withheld information regarding his eligibility status.

FCC's part-time instructors lament lower pay

By Lynn Wilkins
Editor-in-Chief

Five of five part-time instructors interviewed at Fresno City College feel they are being underpaid.

The part-time teachers (those who teach nine or fewer units) are disgruntled with the treatment they are receiving from the college.

Part-timers help college administrators deal with budget problems because they receive strictly an hourly wage, according to Don Larson, FCC Western civilization and American history instructor.

In contrast, full-timers get a wide range of benefits such as medical, dental, optical, retirement and other remunerations in addition to a weekly check, said Larson.

Larson commented, it seems at first glance part-time teachers are paid a substantial hourly wage for the courses they teach.

He noted however, part-timers are not paid for the two or more extra hours they put in for each class period to correct papers and plan classroom discussions.

If someone were to add up all the time spent by the part-timers and divide it by their hourly wage, the results would be shocking, Larson said.

Most of these teachers could make just as much "boxing groceries," he added.

Larson is aware of the problem and sympathetic to the part-time teachers but stresses since the passage of Proposition 13 in 1978, the district has been in a financial bind and "needs to use part-timers to make it (the budget)

Several other community college districts in California have exploited part-timers by employing 75% - 80% of its faculty with part-time instructors, said Larson.

According to Dr. Arthur D. Ellish, dean of instruction, in compliance with California state laws, districts are not allowed to have more than 28% of its courses taught by part-time instructors.

According to Evelyn Fiorani head of the Production Department, FCC employs 219 full-time personnel and 340 part-timers. Which is approximately 40% full-timers to 60% part-timers.

Ellish responded the 60% figure represents the number of part-time instructors and not the percentage of the overall courses they teach.

"Our full-time teachers average six classes per semester. It takes three, four or five part-time teachers to take up that load," explained Ellish.

"We're still far below the 28% maximum," he added.

Ellish also said part-timers are advantageous to the college because their schedules are more flexible.

For example, FCC may offer only one class in a certain area and hiring a part-timer to cover that course, instead of a full-timer, is much less expensive, he said.

All part-time teachers approached were reluctant to comment due to the fear they could be "easily replaced." They also suggested they didn't want to "rock the boat."

One part-time teacher did agree to an anonymous statement.

She said, "As a part-timer, in order to earn a self-supporting income, I have to teach at both FCC and CSUF and teach a heavier unit load than those who have full-time positions.

"And I still earn less than half of what full-time teachers earn. Because I have to teach more classes, I have to make compromises in the amount of time and attention I am able to give each class and each student."

According to this same source, several full-time positions have opened in the past and instead of allowing a part-timer to "step up" to full-time status, the college hired another part-time teacher to carry the load.

The part-timers dissatisfaction with the system will be discussed at the Faculty Senate meeting to be held Wednesday afternoon

Seeking a man's true credentials

Editorial By Deborah Miller

Well, I hope New Hampshire and Iowa voters are satisfied! Gary Hart has finished last in both state's primaries thus far, quite possibly rendering him non-existent in the overall race altogether. And I wonder why!

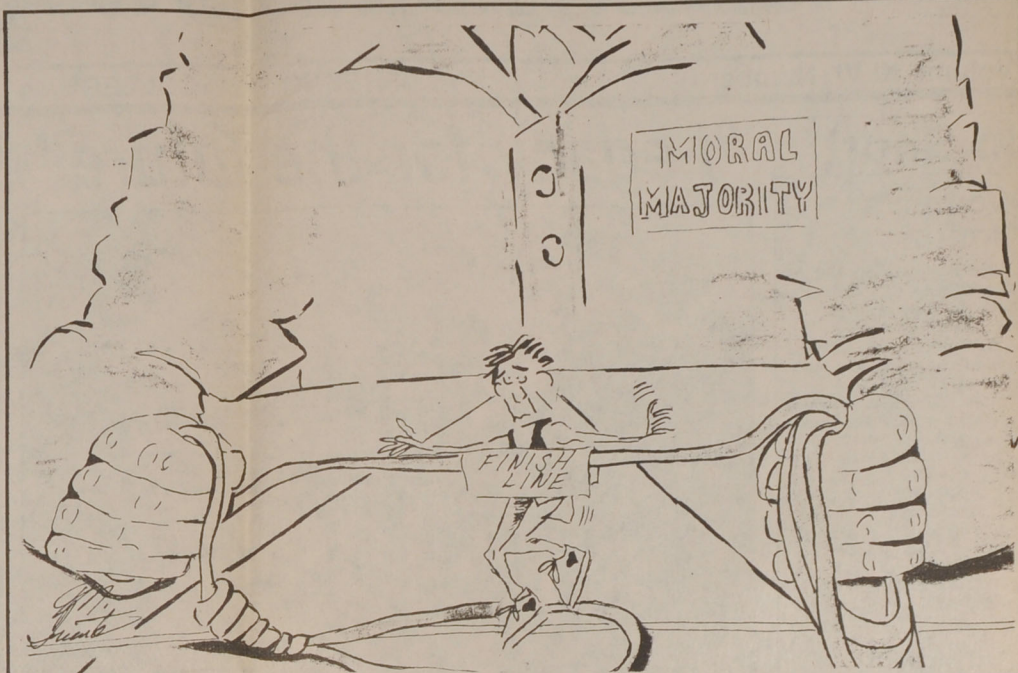

Here's a man who is just as credentialed for the presidential post as any other of his competitors, yet because of one simple indiscretion, the nation "ooh's" and "ah's" and gasps at the prospect of having a healthy, but libidinous young man in office. In a nation where it is almost in vogue for public figures to disclose the most personal of information to the press these days, it seems a little hypocritical of us as U.S. citizens to deface and derail a man's entire career for having an innocent little UNPROVEN fling with a beautiful woman. It could be worse, gang. He could have been caught with a guy on his lap.

Granted, the man was married. But hey, as long as I'm on a roll, it might as well be said that I have no sympathy for women who marry. Especially ones who marry public figures. Especially ones who marry politicians. They should know what they're getting into. The fact that Hart's wife, Lee, is still standing steadfastly by his side, like a loyal ol' hound dog, even though Donna probably wasn't the first (or the last, for that matter), doesn't speak well of her mentality. Apparently too weak or love-blind to simply divorce Hart for his infidelity, Lee must be too busy forgiving him to notice the overwhelming numbers of cheating husbands revealed in national statistics. So women mindless enough to think that their husbands would "never cheat" on them, or just can't accept the fact that maybe they're not satisfying their husbands, have no business blaming the man for "roaming" when infidelity is imbedded in his nature. I think this is where it stops becoming a moral issue. Besides, it's not as if it is the most heinous crime Hart could commit. Trusted public officials do things everyday which should be of greater concern than Hart's inability to effectively govern innate primal impulses. We should be worried about his ability to effectively govern the country. Important issues such as U.S.-Soviet relations, Contra-support, and the deficit seem to be taking a backseat to silly little "morality" squabbles. Real office offenses such as bribery, the misuse of public funds, and lying should be representative of poor leadership, not the man's choice of recreational activity. It's not as if he did something really sick, anyway.

I think it took a lot of intestinal fortitude and an abundance of courage for him to re-run in the face of such glaring hypocrisy and self-righteousness puritanism. It took the kind of guts our leaders should have.

But most importantly, Hart's sexual practices are just simply none of our business! It's not as if he belched self-righteousness and spouted morality and THEN got caught doing nasty-naughties in a seedy motel room like certain prominent religious figures I need not mention. To me, that is loathsome and contemptible!

However, Hart does claim to have the ability to govern this country to the best of his knowledge, like the rest of his competitors. So instead of playing the collective role of SNL's pompous, "Church Lady," the nation might do well to seek a man's true credentials ABOVE the belt buckle.

The mayonnaise mess?

By Deborah Miller
Staff writer

Okay, so I'm seriously addicted to mayonnaise. There have even been times in my life when I've carried my own little pocket sized jar of it in my purse for those nasty emergency situations.

Unfortunately, I hadn't prepared myself for the particularly tragic incident that occurred last week which I'm going to tell you about.

It was about five p.m. that fateful evening when some fellow staffers and I arrived at McCicco's* (a pseudonym) to celebrate another Pulitzer-worthy edition of The Rampage.

Woody with Pepsi* (another pseudonym), I sensed the distinct absence of my favorite condiment as I thrust ravenously into a calzone topped with Alfredo sauce.

Immediately reviled by the idea of eating my first meal of the day without it, I contemplated the absence of mayonnaise in a well-balanced meal. Not a pretty picture!

So, imagine my mortification when the waitress nonchalantly responded to my request for mayonnaise by saying, "We don't carry mayonnaise." Well, really!! A restaurant that doesn't carry mayonnaise? Even though it's an Italian restaurant, you'd figure where there's beef, tomatoes, and cheese, you'd be able to also find mayonnaise!

McCicco's isn't the only restaurant under fire in this article. Among the worst offenders is McDaniel's* (yet another pseudonym, does 60 billion served mean anything to you?). Nevermind the fact that it's a typical hamburger joint, just try getting extra mayonnaise out of them. It's like pulling teeth!

Call it a Freudian thing, but I have insatiable cravings for it. So if the restaurants of America intend to keep me as a customer, they better start pumping out the mayonnaise!!

I regret to inform my readers that due to a limited budget, The Rampage will not be published next Monday, Feb. 7. It will be back on the stands the following Monday, Feb. 14. Thank you for your understanding.

Letter to the editor

Dear Editor,

In regards to a recent letter to the editor, it is obvious to me that there are students on this campus who do not understand the basic concept of a parking permit. The constant grumbling by certain students about the "overselling" of parking permits has finally induced me to jump into the fracas and clarify a few points.

First, the purchase of a parking permit simply allows the holder the privilege of legally parking on campus if there is space available. It does not guarantee the holder a reserved parking place.

Second, the parking permit is an optional purchase and the buyer must weigh the advantages and disadvantages just as he or she would with any purchase. If a student is planning to be at school only during peak hours, then perhaps that student should consider not purchasing a parking permit and spend a few minutes locating convenient off campus parking.

Many students take parking into consideration when they plan their classes, scheduling early morning and afternoon classes. Other students simply arrive early to give themselves time to locate a parking place.

I do not believe the complaining students have thought about the consequences of limiting the number of parking permits sold. The following scenario would be the most likely result:

The students who consider parking when making their schedules and the students who arrive early would be the first in line on the first day the permits went on sale. The students who show up five minutes before class to look for parking would "get around to" getting their permit when it was convenient. Therefore, the students who do the most complaining about parking would be the least likely to purchase a permit before they ran out. I can hear it now..... "When is this college going to stop underselling parking permits?"

The Shade of Paisley By Jeff Purcell

Dear Sirs,
After three weeks of monitoring the cartoon strip "The Shade of Paisley",
The MYMIC (Moral Youths Monitoring Inappropriate Comics) found the content of the strip distasteful and unacceptable for college reading.
If this problem does not cease, censorship will be initiated and a possible ban will occur.

Moonstruck: quality worth looking into

By Erik Hansen
Staff film critic

I'm always looking for the perfect film. Maybe I found it in Orson Wells' "Citizen Kane" or Fellini's "La Strada." Maybe not. When I saw "Moonstruck" last week, I saw what is certainly a runner up.

Lorretta (played by Cher) is a young widow who is dating Johnny Camerai (played by Danny Aiello, a member of Woody Allen's troupe). Suddenly one evening at dinner, Johnny proposes and Lorretta accepts. Johnny must then fly to the "old country" to visit his dying mother while Lorretta is left to make wedding plans.

One thing Lorretta must do in her fiancé's absence is contact his younger brother, Ronny (played by Nicholas Cage), and fix the "bad blood" between them so Ronny can attend the wedding.

The job will prove to be tough, she realizes, as Ronny lost his left hand in an industrial accident five years back and blames his older brother for it.

At first, Lorretta and Ronny are like oil and water, but they soon "take a fall" for each other while Johnny is still in Italy.

Director Norman Jewison, who at age 62, is a force to be dealt with.

In his early career he directed Canadian television, but soon graduated into Hollywood. As the maker of such diverse films from

"Send Me No Flowers" (1964) to "Rollerball" (1975), Jewison strikes pure gold with his latest creation. "Moonstruck" is just the right mixture of comedy and drama. And all of the characterizations are right on target.

Rightfully so, Cher has been nominated to receive an Oscar this April 11. I can only hope for a dead tie between her and Holly "Broadcastnews" Hunter, and that each receive an award they both deserve.

What made the film special for me is the co-starring of Vincent Gardinia as Cher's father Cosmo, and Olympia Dukakis as her mother. Point of interest, Dukakis is the first cousin of leading Democratic presidential candidate, Michael Dukakis.

Rated PG, so the whole family can see it. "Moonstruck" is a must see film. So go see it, then rent it again when it comes out on video in six months!

Cher as "Lorretta" in Metro Goldwin Mayer Picture's "Moonstruck"

Paint it Paisley

By Haze Paisley
Staff cartoon character

I regret to inform all you dedicated "Paint it Black" fans out there that Marc the Armenian was recently kidnapped by a mob of angry Armenian terrorists. So, this week I, Haze Paisley, will take over.

Friends, let us take this moment to reflect on something I believe quite strongly in. That is life on other planets. But first let me ask you, the reader, a few common sense questions.

Do you think it logical to assume that in this vast universe there may be an intelligent form of life out there somewhere?

Of course it's logical, this universe is really huge in case you haven't noticed. And to think otherwise, well obviously you would've had to have just fallen off the turnip truck.

My second question, would it be logical to assume some of the "other life supporting planets" in our universe may have the same chemistry as we do here on earth. You know, the same atmosphere, the same kind of vegetation, et cetera. Now, let's remember kids, the universe is so big that the odds of there being a twin Earth somewhere out there are pretty high.

Also, could you believe it possible that this twin Earth may have a technology far advanced, compared to ours. When I say advanced I don't mean 10, 20, 30 or even 100 years. I'm talking in the thousands, baby!

And would you think it is logical to assume that in a world with a technology thousands of years further along than ours it would be possible to make a space craft able to make it past Earth's "high tech" radar. Sure, why not?

Of course it could also be possible, after thousands and thousands of years, this "other planet" would become over-populated and need to find a new place (maybe... Earth) to dump these left over people? I say yes, yes, yes!!

And friends, could these people have been Adam and Eve. Ah yes! Now doesn't that put a whole new light on things. It all comes together, one man and one woman brainwashed and placed on Earth as an experiment ages ago, yeah I like the sound of that! Forget all that over population B.S. We're talkin' about the science fair winner here.

And now you may ask, how are these brain washed people going to live, having no memory of past life experiences. In fact, these people know nothing of life at all.

So the scientists of this "other world" may have said, "Let's give these people a book so that they have no questions about life or how to live it. And if they question the book may a half a dozen lightning bolts (photon torpedoes) strike them dead."

Now, does it make you wonder or does something deep down inside keep you from asking why?

Eules Park refurbishing

By Marle Andrade
Staff writer

The State Center Community College District Board of Trustees voted Tuesday, Feb. 2 to allocate $148,588 for refurbishing Eules Park, home of the FCC Rams. The money is for installation of a permanent metal 512-seat grandstand, pressbox, new dugouts and a backstop. The budget was intended to cover the costs of construction and architecture-engineering fees.

The Board condemned the 47-year-old grandstand last year due to dry rot and unsafe foundations. According to Dick Ransom, a structural engineer and vice president for William M. Brooks, Inc., who looked into the conditions of the park facilities, the structure would collapse in an earthquake and it would be cheaper to tear it down and rebuild than to try to repair it.

But when the bids went in earlier this month, they all exceeded the established budget. As of this date, the project is still up in the air. The recommendations to the Board are threefold: 1) to reject all bids for the stadium alteration, 2) direct the administration to work toward a minimum cost solution and 3) authorize demolition of the public restroom units still at the ballpark.

Woody Wilks, sports information director said as of this moment no temporary bleachers have been provided, so be prepared to take your own seating. The games will go on as scheduled.

Men's tennis team 'in good shape'

By Corinne Peters
Contributing writer

Derek Simmross and Blake Caudros, numbers one and two respectively on the ladder, will lead the Fresno City College men's tennis team in it's return to the courts for the 1988 season.

Coach Bill Wayne is in his eleventh year as men's tennis coach.

In looking toward the new season Wayne said, "College of the Sequoias will be our toughest competition, COS's number one and two are back and their doubles team beat ours in the semi-finals in the JC Tennis Tourney in Modesto last week."

Two weeks ago the team had it's first match against Santa Rosa beating them 7-2. FCC won four of five three-set matches. Coach Wayne has had his players running hard for the past six weeks, he commented, "winning the three matches means we're lucky or in good shape!"

In Modesto, FCC earned 26 team points to earn third place overall among a field of 30 teams. Deanza, with 27 team points, took second.

In singles, FCC's Simmross won flight one and Caudros took second in flight two, and Ryan Beach reached the semi finals in flight three. Mike Briscione, Cory Stubbs and Matt Mastro reached the quarter finals in flights four, five and six, respectively.

"HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS."

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. I'm also getting another $5,000 for tuition and books, thanks to the New GI Bill.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back—up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000—or more—for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

THE GUARD CAN HELP PUT YOU THROUGH COLLEGE, TOO. SEE YOUR LOCAL RECRUITER FOR DETAILS, CALL TOLL-FREE 800-638-7600,* OR MAIL THIS COUPON.
