Haste Makes Waste; But Who Cares?

Haste makes waste; but who cares? Our world today is built in, on and around this principle. Haste makes waste; but who cares as long as it gets done at any cost?

We of the twentieth century pride ourselves in the advancements we have made. In this rush of progress we forget to look back at the far gap that advancement has opened between ourselves and the past. When we do have occasion to pause and look back, we see there is no turning back. We cannot stop long enough to think about this for the tread-mill of progress is quickly and irresistably drawing us forward. We are so far advanced in a state of quasi maturity that we are in danger of being trapped here by our own pitiful moral and ethical adolescence.

Our knowledge of the atom is advancing in today's weapons to such an extent that the more we know the less capacity we have to control. We take no time in today's world for the Sermon on the Mount, "It doesn't apply to our times." We of the twentieth century know more of war than we know of peace, more of killing than living. Toying with the precarious secrets of life, we stand in chance of being destroyed by those Frankensteins of our own invention. Is this then our century's claim to distinction and progress?

What has all this to do with today's college student? America prides itself in the personal training of its students rather than the mechanical, cold and methodical Russian system that turns out machines rather than citizens. The American system tells its students: Think! How many really do? How many can stop to look back, and then, looking forward through the mist of coming achievements that inevitably lie ahead say this is all right. This is all the way it should be. This path of progress should not be deviated from. There is nothing better, nothing more correct. Let every college student raise his head and say this and soon the word peace on the lips of America, as in the mouth of Russia, will have no more meaning than love on the lips of a charlaton.

Now at college is the time to think. Now is the time to look back and to choose the right path. Today's college student, when he steps up to grasp the reins of the world in an educated hand and lead it in what he considers the right direction with an educated mind, shall either be the pride -Ruggeri or the ignominy of his age.

Night Classes Set Record With 1,835

FCC's evening division has the largest enrollment in its history, with 1,835 students registered. Last spring there were 1,700.

Robert Kelly, dean of the division, said they include 1,023 in academic classes, 781 in apprenticeship, trade extension, and pre-employment classes, and 31 in a special program for the Air Force.

Night lights have been substituted for sunlight as the evening High School.

Courses Vary

Courses being studied range from American literature to business administration, from body and fender to history, and from engineering to physical education.

Students carrying books after dark will find the bookstore and coffee shop open for their convenience from 6:30 to 9 PM Monday through Thursday, the library is open the same days from 6:45 to 9:20 PM, with Librarian Jackson Carty and his staff on hand to help with individual problems.

Kelly said night students may drop a class without penalty within five weeks of the beginning of instruction. However, Friday was the deadline for adding new classes or for new enrollments. The only exception is night apprenticeship classes, which may be entered anytime.

Deadline Set

Honorable withdrawals from classes after five weeks may be made only if the student is pass-

District is building five buildings on the University Ave. campus. These buildings will house FCC's technical and industrial division.

Robert P. Hansler, dean of technical-industrial division, said that the construction work is running on schedule and will be completed on Feb. 2, 1959.

These buildings are divided into five units.

Unit one: machine, welding, body and fender shops, and two drafting rooms.

Unit two: electronics, including radio and television, and auto mechanics.

Unit three: general woodwork. Unit four: graphic arts, including printing, photography, air conditioning, plumbing and general metal work.

Unit five: aircraft, diesel and heavy auto mechanics. Also painting, decorating, roofing and masonry.

The completion of these new buildings will add new programs to the present curriculum. This will include aircraft, diesel, heavy duty mechanics, general metal and air conditioning.

Hansler further stated, "As soon as each building is completed, that particular unit, with approval of the board, will begin instruction."

MISS DORIS DEAKINS

Doris Deakins Tells Students First Problem

If you should ever have the opportunity of talking to Miss Doris N. Deakins, Fresno City College's new dean of women, you would find it to be a most pleasant experience. Miss Deakins who originally hails from Chattanooga, Tenn., and still has a slight southern accent, came to Fresno here via Reedley College where she was a P.E. instructor.

Miss Deakins who has a Bachelor of Arts degree and Master of Education degree from the University of Chattanooga and Womens College of the University of North Carolina, respectively, has been teaching for eight years. During these eight years she was given a leave of absence for one year. Making good use of this time she went abroad traveling through Europe as Recreational Director for the Social Service Department.

Miss Deakins who came in contact with the European school system while she was in Germany has this to say about the German method of teaching, she found them in comparison to the American method much stricter and with little or no outside activity.

Miss Deakins who is a firm believer of the American method of teaching believes it is not surpassed by any other.

From past experience she has found that adjusting to college life and personal difficulties are the hardest problems for incoming students to cope with. Her advice to new students is to keep up with their daily work, and all the while realize the importance of it in the future.

Also important is the association of a student with a club or school

New Foreign Language Language Is On Increase

There is an increasing awareness on the part of students of the importance of foreign languages reports President Stuart M. White. The fact that the new beginning course in Russian is at maximum enrollemnt as are the Spanish and French classes is evidence of this.

The Russian class is open not only to city college students but also to well-qualified juniors and seniors from the high schools in the Fresno City Unified School District. Principals and counselors have enrolled 17 students with good linguistic ability from the Fresno, Roosevelt, and Bullard High Schools.

The instructor is Mrs. Irene Ryzev, a native Russian, who also has started a new class in elementary Russian in the Fresno State College. There is a good possibility that she will teach a night class in the subject next semester.

The course is designed to develop as rapidly as possible the ability to read Russian and to converse on a practical level. It will stress the fundamentals of grammar and pronunciation. The four unit class meets daily and will be a year course.

White said one incentive for students in taking a foreign language is the new state law allowing state colleges to require foreign languages next year in certain majors.

Mrs. Ryzev was a medical student for four years at the University of Rostov. Her studies were interrupted by the German invasion of the Ukraine in World War II. Later she emigrated to Austria, where she worked in a British hospital in a displaced persons camp where she met her husband, Eugenie.

The Ryzevs were married in Austria. He is French but was adopted by Russians living in France. The Ryzevs have a seven year old son, Alexje.

FRESNO CC-COS TO OPEN LEAGUE PLAY

Who will be the champion of the Central California Junior College Athletic Association football race? That question may be answered in full for everyone, when the College of Sequoias Giants meet the Fresno City College Rams in Ratcliffe Stadium, Saturday, Oct. 4. Game time is 8 PM.

The Giants have not been able to break the win column yet this season. They were beaten by Monterey College 14 to 0 in the season opener. Last week they lost to Mt. San Antonio College 13 to 0. The game was much closer than the score might indicate. COS had an edge in almost every department except the scoring column. Mt. SAC made the most of five pass interceptions to turn the tide on the Glants.

Our Rams took their opener from the Fullerton Hornets 22 to 6 and then dropped a 14 to 6 decision to the Stockton College Mustangs. The Rams looked very capable against the Hornets but seemed to be lacking the spirit in the battle with the Mustangs.

up more hills. The course seemed like the work of some fiend. At last a few of the runners staggered across what appeared to be the finish line. You may still be wondering now what, was coming off that afternoon. Well, what was coming off was what is known as a crosscountry meet. Cross-country is one of the finest sports for physical development and the development of such character traits as courage, self-reliance, and modesty. Unfortunately, however, because cross-country meets usually seem to be held on days when it rains, snows, or threatens, people don't flock to them like they were Army-Navy games. But those runners who take part in cross-country, train just as hard and perform just as heroically as any football player. Ginsburg Is Coach

Last fall, Erwin Ginsburg, who has been coaching runners in high school and junior college for over 30 years, organized a cross-country squad at FCC. This year the Rams squad, although lacking in quantity, has enough quality to be among the best in the state.

The team is composed of Paul Richardson, Buss Helm, Bill Tuck, Ken Benscooter, Jess McFerren, and Jerry McPherson.

Richardson was FCC's top miler last track season with a 4:26.7 best. Je's a Clovis High graduate
