Senate discusses African boycott, proposal to change officer titles

The situation of blacks in South Africa was discussed at the last Student Senate meeting of the semester this week. A representative from the Pan African Student Union presented a position paper written by that club on the subject of South Africa for Senate approval.

Some of the items PASU referred to were to support the United States economic boycott of South Africa's products and to encourage FCC students to become more interested in events taking place in South Africa.

Following approval by the Senate, it was decided to take this matter before the student body in the general election next semester.

Legislative Vice President Al Quintana discussed some items referred to by the Constitutional Revision committee. Among the items discussed were the titles of the ASB officers mentioned in section 1, Article 4. Quintana said he feels that their names should be changed from "legislative vice president" to "vice president," from "executive vice president" to "treasurer," and from "recording secretary" to "secretary."

However, these are only suggestions and must be voted upon by the entire student body before the constitution may be revised or rewritten. Quintana called for the next revision meeting to be held tomorrow Dec. 9 at the Senate chambers, SC-205.

Students concerned with what they felt were more important issues asked if they or any interested students could attend the meeting and if their input would be accepted. After a few moments of contemplation, Quintana said yes, and extended his invitation to any interested students.

On a lighter note, President Sue Sorensen discussed putting up and decorating a Christmas tree to be displayed either in the Cafeteria or in the Student Lounge. Interested Senate members will be working on it today.

She also discussed the annual awards banquet and had their adviser, Dave Dickie, take over so they could vote on the outstanding student leader in the Senate, which will be announced at the banquet, Dec. 21 at the Town House.

Carpentry, electrical skills developed here

By Scott Riggs

Ever thought about building your own home?

If you're like many people, you'll probably say yes. By enrolling in carpentry and electricity at FCC, you can gain the experience and knowhow to do just that.

Carpenters and electricians are making big money these days, and FCC has graduated hundreds of men and women who have taken advantage of these courses.

Electrical construction (EL 53) is a learn-by-doing class. Richard Boucher, the instructor, shows the correct methods of wiring homes and reading codes for proper insulation of wires and tells how to use two-phase and three-phase electrical systems.

After taking electricity you can come out with the knowledge of an apprentice electrician, go to work for a journeyman electrician for a year or so and then apply for a contractor's license and start working for yourself.

Apprentices make from $4.50 to $5 an hour and go up from there.

The other program, carpentry, has been a stepping stone for many of Fresno's contractors. Ray Husted teaches the four-semester course and starts with the basics, like proper use of hand tools, safety tests, even vocabulary. The second semester goes into actually building a model apartment house or rough framing it. The building is located in front of the wood shop.

It takes about eight weeks to put up the rough frame so the class is kept pretty busy. Semester 3 goes into putting the interior and exterior on.

Boucher's class has to wire the house just as they would any other residence. The fourth semester deals with building wooden frames for cement and foundations for houses.

Husted also shows techniques of fastening wood to metal, metal to concrete and so on. He is working on a degree in construction technology at CSUF and has been teaching carpentry at FCC for six years.

Pickup for lost, found

Any "lost and found" items will be picked up by an FCC police department officer if staff members notify the office.

SEEN AROUND

Umbrellas as status symbols

By Michale Lehman

When rain falls upon FCC it appears social classes rise as a result. Two distinct classes have risen — the class with umbrellas and the class without. (Somewhere in the middle are those with hoods.)

Now the class with umbrellas are an obnoxious class, indeed. They peer from beneath their havens disapprovingly at the drenched creatures which represent the class below them.

The girl under the umbrella is the nastier. She acts so superior just because her mascara is still on her eyelashes, her blush is still high on her cheekbone, her hair isn't frizzed or straightened and her nose is devoid of raindrops.

Ignoring the obvious, the two classes are easy to tell apart. The class without umbrellas is a very hurried class. The can be seen running around as if they were being chased. Every once in a while they dodge into a building or under a patio as if to take a breather.

The class with umbrellas, on the other hand, act as if they're out for an afternoon stroll. They visit with friends (others with umbrellas) on their way to class. They saunter or stroll or sometimes they can even be seen strutting, in the midst of what the lower class would call "great torrents of wetness."

Another difference between the two classes can be found in their opinion of the Cafeteria.

For the lower class the Cafeteria is a warm refuge from the cruel elements. For the upper class it is sometimes a suitable place to socialize with their dry friends.

For the lower class it is a place to drip dry their curls, remove their drenched outer garments and warm their shivering bodies with warm soup. They drip and slurp while the upper class gab.

Don't despair, though, there is an easy way to do away with social classes all winter long. If you are a member of the lower class at this writing entrance to the ranks of the upper class may not be as difficult as you think.

Yes, even the umbrella you've had since the second grade with the big green hand on it (probably made when the Jolly Green Giant was a big thing) will do. Open it and you'll gain status!

AIR FORCE ALWAYS NEEDS MORE LEADERS.

We're looking for pilots... navigators... missilemen... engineers... math majors... people managers... doctors... scientists... journalists... and more. And the Air Force ROTC program is a great way to get into a job like one of these which can help you improve your leadership ability and your professional competence.

As a commissioned officer in the Air Force, you can be proud of the role you play in your community and the contribution you make to your country's security. You can know that you're doing a job of importance, a job with responsibility. The Air Force ROTC program offers a way to help you achieve these goals. As an AFROTC cadet, you'll learn about leadership, management, and more. You'll learn about benefits of being an officer later on, like an excellent salary, medical and dental care, housing and food allowances, and 30 days of paid vacation each year. You'll discover a whole new world open to you in the Air Force. And you can get there through AFROTC.

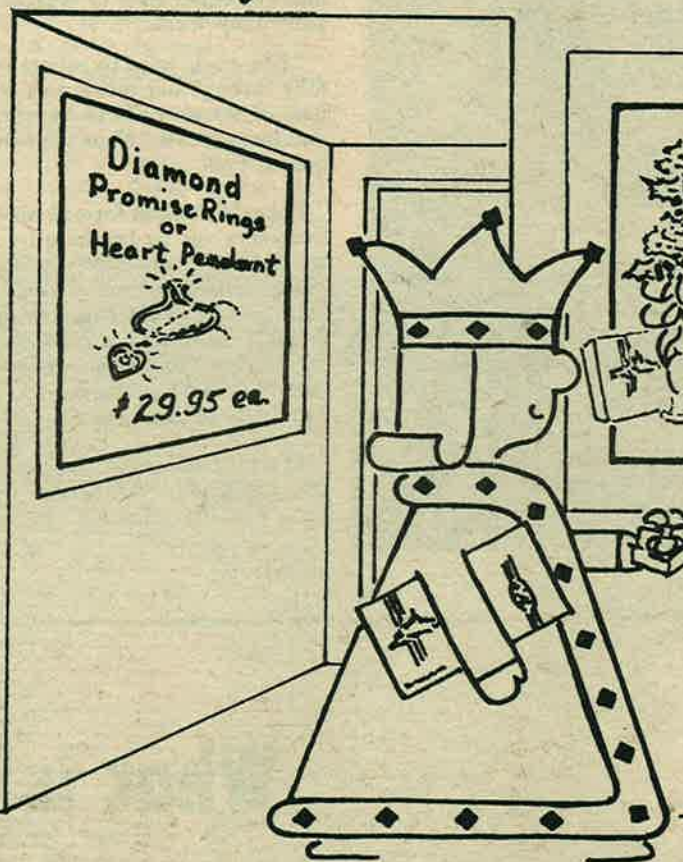

Look into it right away. You'll be glad you did.

'Folly's Pool' no longer seems like folly

Larry Ohl

By Carol Bell

Four young musicians' pursuit of their folly or foolish endeavor in life could be a description of the popular Fresno band, Folly's Pool.

The lead guitarist of Folly's Pool, Larry Ohl, explained that "Doug Carlson, another member of the group, read Carlos Castaneda's 'A Separate Reality,' in which a Yaqui Indian named Don Juan refers to every man's destiny or path in life as a folly: foolish endeavor in the name of experience or whatever you really want.

"The group tries to reflect our folly through our music as a still pool of water reflects anything that looks into it." Thus the name Folly's Pool.

Folly's Pool was formed about five years ago by brothers Doug and Jeff Carlson. However, that group disbanded and it wasn't until two years ago that another Folly's Pool emerged, again with the Carlson brothers, however this time with different musicians, Ohl on lead guitar.

"I wasn't always in the group," Ohl explained. "At first I was just a studio musician. In fact when I was first asked to join I wasn't sure if that's what I wanted. At the time I was heavily into jazz and I wasn't sure if I wanted to change to just playing rock."

Ohl did join and is very happy playing with the group as it has not been confined solely to rock. In fact, Ohl could not really put the group into any definite category. "We play many idioms of music. Not just rock or country, for instance, but many different types." Doug Carlson writes most of the music for the group. However, Ohl said the other members, including himself, are writing more and more.

Ohl said, "My musical background is really kind of weird. I began learning guitar about seven years ago basically because my brother, whom is a year older than me, was learning. That didn't last long, however, as the teacher told my parents that I had no ability for music and I was one of his worst students.

"I taught myself and practiced until finally I called him up again and he gave me more lessons. This time I learned surprisingly fast and in three or four months I had soaked up all his knowledge and he said he could teach me no more."

He has been involved in music ever since. "I played in an obscure little band called Omen, which was a really good learning experience for me. I didn't go a lot of places and get the exposure I have in Folly's Pool but it was a great learning experience."

He also has studied music theory at City College. "I just love music," he said. "And I have a philosophy about people and work. You have to be happy at what you're doing. Even if you're not making any money, if you're happy, then that's it."

Ohl's ambition in life is not necessarily to stay with the band. "Although I love playing in Folly's Pool, some day I want to be able to just learn as many different styles of music as I can and be good. Not great, because you can't be great at them all. I just want to be good."

Ohl has the backing of his family. His mother, Edna Ohl, said, "I think it's just great that he plays in the group. We've encouraged him every step of the way."

It seems, with all of this, that Folly's Pool is not just a pool's reflection of four musicians' foolish endeavors. Rather, it's a top band headed for a big future.

Like new wavish power pop? Listen to Fresno's 'Orchid'

By Laura Batti

Know what you get when you mix the music of the Beatles, the Cars, the Supremes and Frank Zappa? You get the unique sound of Orchid.

Orchid is a band from Fresno that consists of five talented musicians — George "Carmen Borehair" Rotalo, Jim "Hugh" Carter, Tony "Yogi" Negrete, Robin "Bone" Tani and Jeff "Drumkins" Wilkens.

They met during elementary and junior high school, but started the group about a year ago. Another classmate of theirs, Pat DeFuria, manages the group.

"We don't play any one kind of music, but if you had to describe the music we play, I'd say it's new wavish power pop," said Jim. Added George, "I'd say it's more a smorgasbord of music."

The group also writes their own music. "George, Tony and I write music, but without the input from everyone in the group, it just wouldn't be the same," said Jim.

"Besides our own songs, we do a lot of nostalgic music."

I had the chance to hear Orchid do their versions of the Beatles' "Back In The USSR" and the Supremes' "Stop In The Name Of Love," and they were excellent.

Orchid is also well known for their stage show, which ranges from dressing up in costumes to doing imitations of singers. They also do a couple of songs from the movie, "Rocky Horror Picture Show."

"We also have a lot of people who come out of the audience and make a guest appearance singing," said Jim.

"We also have the Orchettes, two girls, Linny and Cindy, who sing with us," said George.

One of Orchid's fans told me, "When they play, it doesn't matter where you are, people get up and start dancing. I always have a great time."

Orchid practices five nights a week in an old theater in downtown Fresno.

"We've been in the studio for awhile and plan on putting out a single in a few months, then after that we may possibly put out an album," said Jim.

"We've played up in the mountains and we play the Wild Blue Yonder a lot. We're looking for a fulltime gig too."

It's impossible for me to explain how good Orchid is, but you have a chance to find out. They'll be playing at the Wild Blue Yonder on Dec. 28.

Coach Gene Stephens

Prep league honors FCC swim coach

By Carol Bell

Swimming and water polo coach Gene Stephens was honored recently when the 1978 North Yosemite League water polo tournament was dedicated in his honor.

The program read, "We would like to take this opportunity to thank Gene Stephens, Fresno City College teacher and coach for his continued support and guidance to the sport of water polo and his dedication to the game throughout the years. Thank you."

Stephens, at the tournament to recruit players for next year's FCC team, bought a program to become better acquainted with the various players. "I turned to the first page and was amazed to read of the honor that had been bestowed upon me," said Stephens.

Stephens came to Fresno in 1946 after teaching swimming safety, etc., at an Alameda naval base. He saw that Fresno was a pleasant community with a great potential for swimming as a popular sport, so in 1950 he and his wife, Betty organized the Fresno Swim Club, an AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) affiliate which has produced many world ranking swimmers, including the famous Heather Greenwood.

Stephens has been instrumental in obtaining swimming facilities in many Fresno schools. He has been involved lately in the development of a water polo program for the district schools. Stephens has been at City College for 15 seasons now and has had good results, with 12 of his swimmers being all Americans in junior college swimming.

Twice Stephens has been presented with awards of excellence by the American Coaches Association for his guidance of his swimmers in the Fresno Swim Club. He is also the author of a booklet entitled, "Teach Your Child to Swim."

Unbeaten basketball teams will play weekend tourneys

By Henry Gutierrez

The basketball teams are off and roaring to a great season. The men are currently 3-0, with wins over Lemoore NAS (twice) and Cuesta College. The women's team at 4-0 is also enjoying an unblemished mark.

FCC's men have had a series of well-played games in which they have had a balanced scoring attack. Craig Cleveland, an ex-Hoover forward, scored 24 points in the first win over LNAS and had 12 points to share scoring honors with John Langston in the Cuesta victory.

Ricky Ryan scorched the Lemoore squad the second time by scoring 20 points and Keith Postler helped out with 14. Seven other Rams were able to score in double figures. FCC scored a convincing 131-49 victory.

Owning victories over the Merced Shamrocks and the CSUF JV team, the Ram women were able to post two easy victories in non-league action. Lemoore fell to FCC 44-13 last Tuesday after leading 28-7 at halftime. Sanger product Colleen Ferrel led the female stars with 14 points and Denise Jones, a volleyball standout, added 10.

In Salinas Friday, the women scored a 55-39 win over Hartnell. Linda Harvey, a sophomore, led the Rams with 21 points, and Ferrel tanked 14 to pace the undefeated hoopsters.

The men's squad will travel north to play in the Merced Tournament Dec. 7-9 and come home Tuesday to host Porterville in a 7:30 game in the Ram gym.

Track prospects good

FCC trio compete in LA decathlon

The Rams should enjoy a good crop of track standouts this track season.

The coaching staff, headed by Bob Fries and assisted by Ken Dose, will have reviewed the candidates for their season at a meeting yesterday and will be ready to weigh their prospects.

The men's squad will have a bevy of last year's high school standouts and some important returnees that will provide leadership.

In Glendale last weekend, Kevin O'Reilly of FCC combined with two other Ram athletes in the Glendale Community College Winter Decathlon.

O'Reilly's total of 5594 was slightly ahead of teammates Corey Miller, with 5,339, and Dan Rhoades, 5,035.

The three combined for a 16,027 total in this two-day meet, in which more than 100 competitors took part.

Next week a deeper look at the team will be made.

SKI cool idea for cold weather pleasure...

Gas going up

Remember back about six years ago when America went through the gas shortage scare? Well, they're at it again. That's Shell Oil, the largest oil company in America.

Shell claims there has been too great a demand for gas, mainly unleaded, so Shell is going to start rationing gas to their dealers. Gas stations will only be able to order 75 per cent of the gas that was ordered last December and no more than 38 per cent may be unleaded.

Shell also blames the shortage on "unrealistically low" prices set by government regulations. They must be kidding, low prices? Today, regular gasoline costs on the average 63 to 66 cents and unleaded goes from 68 to 75 cents a gallon, and they call those low prices.

When you consider the fact that Shell can produce gas for almost the same price as 15 years ago and gas then was 20 to 25 cents and it is now 65 cents, they're making about 30 cents profit on each gallon.

And now if government regulations are lifted, the price of gas will go right through the roof.

Since Shell has started rationing gas how much farther back can Chevron, Richfield and EXXON be? Will they start rationing? They say no, but then Shell only gave us one day's warning about their rationing gas.

One thing is clear from this little rationing bit by Shell and that is that the American people are virtually at the mercy of oil companies. Shell oil is giving the shaft to the people royally.

What's a 'cult'?

The Guyana tragedy has directed attention to the phenomenon of religious "cults" in the United States.

Cults have received considerable publicity in the last few years. Everyone has heard of or knows someone who's a Moonie (member of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church) or into Scientology or Hare Krishna.

Repeatedly occurring in connection with cults is the idea of brainwashing and coercion of members. After recent events in Jonestown, one must wonder about what inducement would cause parents to allow their children to be poisoned or to willingly partake of the poison themselves.

And what about the other stories of incomprehensible devotion to a leader or a cause? How can we explain what would cause an intelligent person to work 15 hours a day and devote spare time to prayer and fasting, sleep on floors and give away all his possessions, as has been reported of Moonies and others?

We are all appalled at the idea that people can so lose themselves to a leader or group that their will and power to decide for themselves are gone. They may become tools of others to carry out abominable acts such as suicide and murder.

Cult. An ominous sounding word. Let's change it for a moment and consider the actions of a "church" as opposed to a "cult."

Almost two thousand years ago, the early Christians sacrificed themselves rather than change their beliefs. They allowed themselves to be killed (a form of suicide). But then, since they were Christians, I guess suicide was okay.

During the Middle Ages, righteous leaders of the church tortured and burned people at the stake in the name of God and church. It's a good thing they weren't called a cult, eh?

How many people today allow their lives and morals to be dictated by their minister or priest?

Are we so sure that "cult" and "church" are unrelated?

As people react to the recent Guyana incident by calling for limitations on the freedoms and practices of "cults," in this country, let them remember that the same Constitution which allows them to meet on Sunday morning for their acts of ritualized symbolic cannibalism (Communion) and indoctrination of members (Sunday School) allows the "cults" to try to reach God in their own way.

Writers urge child care center

Dear Board Members:

I would sincerely like to see a day care center here because it is needed very badly and would help many students who are going into child development or child education.

And I think it will be very much appreciated because many people need this type of head start program and there is a great numbers of people who are willing to support the program.

I'm writing this letter about the need for a day-care center. Many students in this school have young children in need of supervision during the day.

If this supervision is not available the students cannot take sufficient care of their child, while also getting a higher education.

Why must both the child and parent suffer because of the lack of facilities?

Dear Board Members,

I am writing in deep concern of the matter of the Head Start program. Although I am not active in the program, I am fully aware of the issues and problems involving the program.

This deeply concerns me because I feel a program if this sort is genuinely needed as an offering in the FCC program. The time is now! We need this service now. Those parent/
