Lefties Not Equal In Righthanded World

by Timo Tuovinen

A lefthanded person twists his wrists in an awkward manner in an attempt to produce readable text. Before he learns the right methods, the only result usually is a big mess and an inky hand.

In a righthanders society "lefties" have other problems, too. Most technical equipment (watches, guns and tools) are poorly designed for lefties.

Lefties are a definite minority. Less than 10% of Americans know how it feels to work and operate machines designed for the right handed people's majority.

Are we dealing with a direct discrimination?

Only a few years ago when parents noticed their child was to grow up to be a leftie, they tried to change this fact. Practice to become righthanded began early. Parents were definitely wrong in trying to change their children. It only resulted in poor handwriting and confused motor function when the child tried to act against his natural qualities.

Fortunately nowadays lefties' special needs are recognized more and attempts for necessary alterations are being made.

Lefties are far from equality. Have you ever noticed how many desks for lefties there are in your classroom? Fresno City College does declare being an institution, which does not discriminate on the basis of sex, religion, age or handicap. Can being lefthanded be considered a handicap? Obviously not.

Studies of left and righthanded people are conducted in many research institutes around the world. Last year's Nobel Prize was given to scientist Roger Sperry who studied the relation between both the brain halves by examining split brains.

Study of hands (lateral study) is not a new field in science but so far the results have not explained several aspects connected with the hands. An ability to write as well with both hands (simultaneous writing), is known only as an interesting curiosity. The background of simultaneous writing has not yet been explained scientifically.

Left handers' life is dominated by the right hemisphere of the brain. According to many scientists, the functions of the brain can be divided in two major areas. The left hemisphere takes care of quantitative matters based on knowledge. Numeric, rational thinking is also located in the right hemisphere.

The right hemisphere deals with beauty and aesthetic values. It might not be just a coincidence that Pablo Picasso, Leonardo Da Vinci and Michaelangelo were all left handed.

Exaggerated conclusions from the differences of the two hemispheres can be drawn. It is said that people who think with the left side of their brain have ambitious personalities and would do just about anything to gain more material things in their life.

The right hemisphere makes a person think with empathy, and consider other people in his decisions.

However, connection between these assumptions is not clear. The result of the differences between the two hemispheres are not generally accepted.

ART, MAGIC SHOW AT FCC

The Fresno City College Art Gallery will have a one man retrospective show of paintings from September 7th thru September 30th.

The featured artist is Kent Steadman.

A special celebration of Mr. Steadman's work will be on Tuesday, September 14th, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The celebration will be an evening of magic, music and art inspired by Celtic and Middle Earth themes. A charge of $1 per person for the celebration will go to the Fresno City College Art Gallery.

Materials Fee Approved

by Sam Williams

Trustees of the State Center Community College District unanimously approved the proposed instructional materials fee at Wednesday's board of trustees meeting.

For the first time, beginning with the spring 1983 semester, students from Fresno City and Kings River Community Colleges will pay a maximum fee of $30 per semester to help defray the cost of instructional materials.

The board rejected the controversial proposal in May by a 4-3 vote.

A random survey of 300 students at FCC suggested that the average student would pay only $9.15 to attend FCC.

The survey reported that two-thirds of FCC students would pay less than $10, while 85 percent would pay less than $15.

Students at KRCC are expected to pay slightly more since students there enroll in more units.

Due to student pressure, the fee will not be refundable. The original proposal called for re-funds through the fourth week of school.

The fee proposal was also endorsed by the ASB Senate at FCC.

ASB president David Pinuelas said, "last Thursday, the new senate took the position that we are, at this time, in favor of the materials fee and the proposed

He said MEChA's purpose is to promote education and the fee will make that job more difficult.

Rivera was against the waiver proposal, which would allow low income students who qualify for financial aid but who were denied aid due to a lack of funds to be exempted from the fee.

"If you're going to give us a waiver," said Rivera, "I'd rather see nothing, because it's just like going to the welfare and proving a need for their aid."

Pat Andrews, a student at FCC also spoke against the fee.

"I am adamantly opposed to the fee," said Andrews.

She also said, "students who are opposed to the fee are not being adequately represented through the Rampage."

Andrews suggested, as an alternative to the fee a pay freeze for faculty and administration. She also questioned if the district budget would stand up under examination by an attorney funded by the students.

Student representatives from KRCC were split on the fee.

New student trustee Mark Jennings said he was in favor of the fee while KRCC's new ASB president Olivia Ledesma said she was opposed to it.

Grant Marcus, former ASB president at FCC said, in an interview following the meeting, "I feel that because of dire budget problems some of which the administration is responsible for, a materials fee is needed. A fee, however, should be conducted with sensitivity to low-income students. There can be a defined waiver that would include up to 25 percent of the student body. We can still gain up 90 percent to the money while keeping fees at a reasonable level. This kind of fee would be fair to all."

Dean of Instruction Dr. Arthur Elish said after the meeting, "It's not over yet. Students are going to pay. And they're going to have to pay more."

Elish was not optimistic about the future, "It's frightening. I just don't know where it's going to end."

"We hope in developing future budgets, we can find other avenues to balance the budget than student materials fees." David Pinuelas

While many student were opposed to the fee proposal, in the last two weeks the proposal has received wide support.

Both the need for the fee and the proposal itself were unanimously approved by the Extended-Augmented-Chancellor's Cabinet. This body includes student, faculty and administrative representatives.

amendments that go along with it."

He was concerned, however, that students would continue to bail the district out of its budget deficits.

"We hope," said Pinuelas, "in developing future budgets, we can find other avenues to balance the budget than student materials fees."

Mark Knipper, a student senator spoke against the fee.

"I stand here strongly opposed to fees," said Knipper.

"I really feel that what the community college district is doing is digging its own LaBrea tar pits in this instance."

"I don't feel cuts have been made in the proper places," said Knipper.

He asked how the district could allocate $63,000 to pay a firm to raise $650,000 to put an all-weather track at Ratcliffe Stadium while charging students a materials fee.

He also asked the board to give students an alternative way to generate the income expected from the proposed fee.

"Give us an opportunity to raise funds to defer this fee, and we will do it."

Knipper said the administration has pursued the materials fee as the only alternative and likened the procedure to a horse wearing blinders.

"I can't live with it," said Knipper. "I can't accept it."

Larry Rivera, president of MEChA at FCC also spoke against the fee.

"Our president doesn't have the right to speak for MEChA," said Rivera. He said no one has asked for MEChA's opinion.

Nuclear Freeze Now

by Dan Immel

There are probably very few people around that can accurately described the devastation caused by a single modernday nuclear warhead.

President Reagan nor the hawks in the Pentagon cannot or will not let it strike fear in the hearts of the "true" American Patriots.

Proponents of a bi-lateral nuclear weapons freeze proposal have an idea of the total destruction that may be involved, but it hardly comes close to the real thing.

Of course, weapons freeze supporters hope that something will be done to avoid the Armageddon.

We have all, at one time or another, viewed photographs or films of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki nightmares, however, it is doubtful that the images of these events can provide a clear impression of the devastation witnessed and suffered by millions of Japanese. It is too vast to be comprehended.

It was during the Nixon administration when armament policies and treaties began to take a definite direction of actual arms control. Nuclear weapons in particular, which were still being produced at the rate of one a day.

The ever pretentious Nixon perpetuated the Russians as being so far ahead in the arms race that new treaties became outdated before they were signed.

Then Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, warned against such rhetoric that described the Russians as militarily or technologically superior.

Unfortunately, presidents Ford and Carter did very little to calm America's paranoia of the larger-than-life Russians.

Now the Reagan administration has taken two giant steps backward in the name of progress and a communist-free America and has renewed fears of Soviet superiority.

The administration which once gave lip service to the idea of a bi-lateral weapons freeze now shuns it as they feel such a proposal would permanently lock Russia ahead in the escalating arms race.

The anti-Red Reagan has himself casted the idea aside, calling it a preposterous cripple to national security and has gone so far as to pledge that America will always be numero uno.

Recently, the Center for Defense Information has concluded in a study the United States has a stockpile of 12,000 atomic warheads compared to a number that is one-third less for the Soviets. This includes all the land, air, and sea based warheads that can be used in the event of a nuclear outbreak.

Soviet land based missiles outnumber those of the US however, the report substantiates superiority of US seaborne and airborne nuclear weapons and Soviet inferiority in these areas.

Clearly, it is the intention of Reagan to possess the edge in all aspects of a nuclear war, as indicated by a proposed $216 billion budget for the Pentagon in the new fiscal year which begins October 1.

Proponents of the freeze initiative include Sen. Edward Kennedy, Gov. Jerry Brown, and a growing number of members of the Senate and House of Representatives who realize the safety of America lies within the essence of the bi-lateral freeze proposal and not the irresponsible and wanton defense spending of the Reagan administration.

Californians and millions of others throughout the country will have the chance to voice their concerns of the nuclear race during the November elections.

Whatever the results may be, it is clear Americans are seriously contemplating the prospects of a nuclear-free society.

OPINION

Ramburger Roundup

by Sam Williams

Traditions always die slow, painful and lingering deaths. So it is with the Ramburger Roundup, a tradition at Fresno City College for over a quarter of a century. The Associated Student Body Senate apparently feels the traditional fall event is no longer worth funding. The ASB, however, is making a big mistake. We need the Ramburger Roundup.

The Ramburger Roundup was an evening of music and food shared by students, staff, faculty and administration. As a mixer, the Ramburger Roundup served a real function. Members of the campus community had an opportunity to sit down and have dinner during their off hours. Everyone, students and staff, could be just plain folks.

An event of this type leads to a feeling of community. That feeling was lacking last semester. Students claimed the administration was not sensitive to the needs of students. Perhaps if there had been a Ramburger Roundup last year students would not have such an attitude.

It was the attitude of students that caused the end of the Ramburger Roundup. Minority groups picked on the Ramburger Roundup two years ago. They said the event was not representative of minority students. The ASB said the event was poorly attended and lost a great deal of money.

These arguments are absurd. There is nothing racial about the Ramburger Roundup. And as for the ASB concerns, the last Ramburger Roundup was attended by over 600 students and staff. Not enough to fill Ratcliffe Stadium, but not a bad turnout for a barbeque. And if the ASB and food services are losing money on this large event, the problem is not the event, but the way they are running it.

Members of the ASB give us a Ramburger Roundup. It is sorely missed.

Poor Turnout For Local Jazz Festival

by Delight E. Blackman

The 1982 Jazz Valley Festival could have been a strong source of publicity for the local Valley bands; however, poor attendance limited the effectiveness of the event.

Only the front part of the Fresno Fairgrounds Paul Paul Theatre was filled during the afternoon and evening performances.

A variety of performers were seen during the two-day event September 2nd and 3rd. Among the local groups on Friday the 2nd were the Terry Mc Donnell Trio, whose bassist and drummer are from Fresno. Ron Smith, the bassist, earned his Master's degree in composition from California State University, Fresno. Chris Miller, the drummer, is a local power in music.

The featured international artist Friday night was Carmen McRae. She is ranked among the world's leading jazz singers. She has a unique style and phrasing that draws attention her way every time she steps before a microphone. And she did not disappoint.

Saturday's lineup included the CSUF Jazz Quintet. This group is a very solid-sounding one, and their numbers included some outstanding synthesizer work by Craig Von Berg, the group's keyboard man. This kind of high-level use of the synthesizer is refreshing in a local group.

Possibly the Valley group with the most promise is the group L-5. This band has a sound that could really go places. All the instrument work is tightly knit and supportive. However, on the band's numbers "Rio de Janeiro Blues" and "On My Own", a Ronnie Laws tune, the vocals are not innovative and they lack the kind of musical tension necessary for top notch jazz singing.

The guest artist at the Festival for Saturday night was flutist Herbie Mann. This "Mann" has been in the jazz foreground for years and holds his own with premier flutists such as Hubert Laws. He has backed up many other musicians and has played in touring groups and ensembles worldwide. His own Family of Mann follows in his tradition of greatness. And for such well-known artists such as Mann and McRae to appear at a festival such as this decries the paltry attendance. In a larger city such as Los Angeles jazz concerts and festivals are sold out in advance. The jazz enthusiasts of Fresno would do well to show up in the future.

NEW INTERN

Greckle Joins Staff

by Delight E. Blackman

Pat Greckle, a psychological intern, is one of two new counseling staff members at the Counseling Center at Fresno City College. He is a fourth-year doctoral intern with the California School of Professional Psychology. He has a wide variety of teaching and counseling experience, ranging from a year in Niger, West Central Africa, as a member of the Peace Corps, to a position at the well-publicized Willowbrook State School in New York.

Greckle is concerned with a counseling program created by Dr. Richardson, Director of the Counseling Center. A Crisis Intervention Program for students, this program offers short-term immediate counseling and referral services if long term help is needed. The program is designed to enable students to cope with major problems of scholastic life and other vital areas so that school is not threatened as a result of their various difficulties.

Greckle is married and has lived in the Fresno area and, prior to that, in New York City. He holds two Master's degrees in psychological counseling and rehabilitation from Columbia University. He hopes to do a doctoral dissertation on procrastination.

Movie Review

"Garp" Deals Hilariously With Sex, Feminism

by Timo Tuovinen

The "World According to Garp" is a joyful victory of imagination. There is an endless chain of hilarious scenes and situations, which provide an enjoyable adventure for the viewer.

Appearing as comedy on the surface, Garp has deeper meanings behind it. The whole movie turns out to be an interpretation of the relationship between man and woman.

Prostitution, bastards, feminism, marriage, nothing seems to be too sacred or delicate to be handled in Garp.

Garp begins with an absurd scene of a baby jumping in the air. At this point the viewer is forced to ask himself: "What is going on in here?" The characterization of a good movie is fulfilled in Garp, as the viewer asks himself AFTER the movie: "Just what in the heck was that?"

Garp is a story of one man's life. The skillful description of a young boy's desire for having other-than-imaginary father is enriched with a very unusual decision of using animation in the midst of a traditional motion picture. However, director-producer George Roy Hill's decision is right. When describing imaginary scenes, means of imagination are acceptable.

Young Garp's world of values is strongly influenced by his mother, a nurse in an educational institute. The mother-son relationship dominates the whole movie. In the final scenes, as this relationship is tragically broken, an air of despair and anger can be sensed.

Awakening sexuality is the key theme of the movie. The difference of sexes reaches its culmination point as a friend of Garp's declares while looking at a nude magazine: "I wish I was a girl so I could stand in front of a mirror for a whole day and just look at myself."

The basic seriousness of the movie is skillfully covered with humorous scenes and characters. An airplane flying into Garp's house or a football player who has had a sex change operation are examples of those off-the-wall ideas that make one wonder whether they are originated from director Roy Hill or John Irving, whose novel the movie is based on.

Garp as an adult is played by Robin Williams. Williams' ability to stretch himself to a variety of roles ranging from Mork to Pop-eye is almost phenomenal. Robin Williams has the ability to make believable characters whether they are a betrayed husband or a schoolboy on his first date.

The feminist movement gets a new focus at the latter half of the movie. A peaceful sea-side resort for emotionally handicapped women changes rapidly to scenes of unexplained violence, which represents the enormous gap between men and women.

The "World According to Garp" is a confusing movie. It can be watched with laughter and smiles and still one feels he got entertainment worth his money. Absurd incidents dominate the movie and give an impression of comedy. However, below that level an observant viewer can find a lot of truth in life in general.

Garp never loses his passion for life and living. Truly fulfilling is the finale of the movie where Garp's life long dream comes true.

There is no doubt that after the movie everybody can agree with Garp as he cries out: "Having a life is an adventure."

The World According to Garp is currently showing at Fig Garden Cinemas.

Red and Gold Scrimmage

Rams are Strutting

by Sam Williams

SPORTS DESK

New receivers are Eric Willis and Leonard Safford. Safford, also from Alabama, was a real high-light of the scrimmage.

Again, coach Musick has a variety of offensive weapons to confuse and dazzle opponents.

The Rams defense looks good too. Kevin Gleen intercepted a Gaynor pass. Of course, Mario McArn is returning as are Anthony Montanez and Quincy Washington.

Todd Eaton sacked Gaynor and it was easy to tell that it made his day. I'm sure opposing quarterbacks will be seeing a lot of Eaton.

The kicking game looks great too. The kicking chores will be handled by Randy Barker and Anthony Montanez.

The broadcast side of the Rams is coming along as well. Gus Zernial will be doing the play by play for all 10 games on KTED (97.7 FM).

FCC's own RamNet will again take to the airways, broadcasting all the home games on Fresno Cable Channel 11. The games will be aired the following Saturday at 12 noon.

Mark Aydelotte, public information officer at FCC, and director of RamNet is looking forward to a great season.

"It's going to be fun," said Aydelotte.

"If we make the championship game we'll broadcast that one too," said Aydelotte. "Not if," Aydelotte quipped, "but when."

Aydelotte said the video quality should be much improved from last year's broadcasts. He said RamNet has borrowed two broadcast quality cameras from Channel 53 and this should allow more special effects.

Aydelotte said RamNet now has 17 student volunteers, but "We're always looking for more."

He said, "RamNet gives students an opportunity to be exposed to all aspects of video production."

Any student interested in working with RamNet should contact the public information office at 442-8258.

And for those brave souls who wish to follow the exploits of the Rams on the road, two games can be attended by taking roter buses.

The buses, sponsored by Community Services will be attending the games in Bakersfield on September 18 and Monterey on October 9. The cost is $21.00 general and $19.50 students.

You can see the Rams scrimmage against the 1981 national champions, Sacramento City College, Saturday, September 11, at 1 p.m. at Ratcliffe Stadium. Admission is free.

ALL-AMERICAN — Doug Gaynor, Most Valuable Player in the Central Valley Conference will be launching the Rams' passing game.

Rooters' Buses

So you'd like to follow the Ram football team on the road but don't have the transportation eh? Well, not to worry. FCC's Office of Community Services is sponsoring booster buses to FCC's games against Bakersfield (Sept. 18) and Monterey Peninsula (Oct. 9). Cost of the Bakersfield excursion is $21 ($19.50 for students) and includes transportation, game admission, and a pregame barbecue with the Renegade Boosters. The Monterey trip fees are the same but don't include a pregame meal. That's okay though because you'll have a chance to sightsee and shop around the beautiful Monterey Peninsula. You'll have a chance to dine at one of the many fine restaurants in the area prior to the game. For details, call 442-8256.

These reports are based on information supplied to the Rampage by the campus police department. All these cases are under investigation. If you are the victim of a crime—report it.

If you have any information about a crime on campus, or if you have any information on a suspect—please contact Campus Police Chief Shrum at 442-8201. This is a 24-hour number.

Stricter action will be taken against people found guilty of stealing on campus. Such crime will no longer be considered as petty theft, but as a burglary and possession of stolen goods, both of which are felonies.

Ram Basketball Practice: What Happened To Football?

by Jesse Duran

Quickness. That's what I saw at a recent practice session of a Fresno City College Ram basketball team.

Basketball? Football hasn't even started yet and you're talking about basketball.

Yes, that sport that is meant to be played in the winter. Though, summer is still with us, the F.C.C. basketball team are having practice sessions.

They are involved in a P.E. 5 class for the first nine weeks of the semester. This P.E. 5 class is generally set for the basketball players and persons trying out for the ball club.

"There is an awful lot of things to cover," says Coach Gary Hulst, his third year at F.C.C. "Plus, we have many kids from different offensive and defensive backgrounds and the kids like these sessions also which makes it fun. The league is going to be tougher this year as more teams have done heavy recruiting. It's the toughest in the state."

Pointing out some strengths on the team the coach said, "We have strong kids physically. For position probably they go major college strength. I'm not talking about ability and knowledge which all comes later but physically they are strong."

Coach Hulst also noted another strength which has to do with the quickness of the team.

"We probably have as fast of a team as any in the country. They can go!" Hulst noted that he is pro fast break but that a balance team best suits him. He noted that last year F.C.C. was as good on defense as offense while other ball clubs were playing tempo (stall) ball.

The Rams will be returning three players from last year's squad: center Andre Patterson, and guards Cy Adams and Jim Stallings.

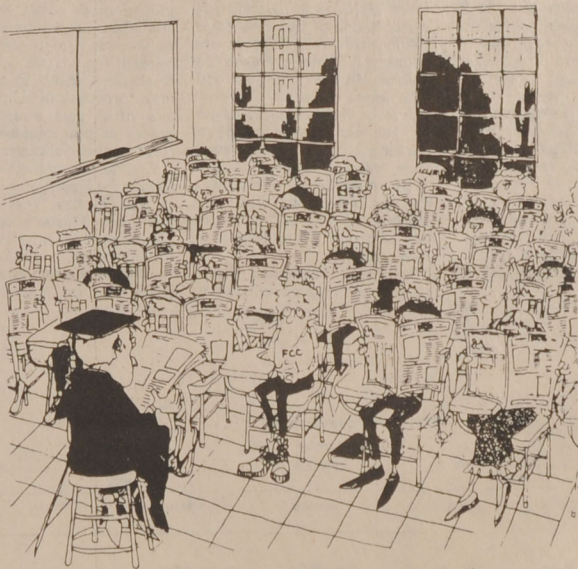

"We are going to win the championship because we play together and have a lot of determination," says Patterson.

"The team looks very good," says Adams. "We have good strong freshmen and people who play with heart."

Even though the beginning of the season is still a couple of months away, it looks like the Rams are going to have another fine season. The Rams look like they will be right in the thick of the race with perennial powers Merced and College of the Sequoias.
