

Students Produce Two One-Act Plays

by Julie Kienast
Rampage Reporter

Two one-act plays were presented by the Fresno City College theatre arts department May 6, 7, and 8th in the lab theatre. The first was The Death of Bessie Smith. The play takes place in Memphis, Tennessee, in the 1930s.

The play centered around a hospital in Memphis in the days of racial segregation. The story dealt with the frantic attempts of a black man to get medical help for his girl friend after an auto accident. He was informed that the hospitals were for whites only.

At the first hospital he was called a "nigger" and told to just wait. At the second hospital the intern decides to take a look at the victim in spite of the threats against his job.

He was too late for the accident victim, Bessie Smith, the famous black singer.

Even though it was a grim reminder of the way things were in those days, I felt some of the racist remarks could have been omitted.

Christina Leon played a cocky southern nurse. She had a confrontation of one kind or another with every other character in the play.

Transfer Information

Sofia Hernandez from FEOC will once again be stationed at the EOP&S office, SS-103, Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. with the exception of the lunch hour. Also, the 1982-83 financial aids applications are out. If you plan on transferring to a four-year college or university this fall semester, 1982 you may also see Miss Hernandez for assistance.

She was arrogant and uncaring as she spat out insult upon insult to belittle both the black orderly, played by Albert James Smith III, and the intern (Robert Ruth) who tried to seduce her.

Her father was played by Richard Orozco, who did a fine job of looking and acting like a little old man. He appeared to have been primarily living off his daughter, and in poor psychological health. He spent most of this time trying to impress the mayor and other cronies of his imagined importance.

The acting, directing, and all aspects of the play were very well done. The play was written by Edward Albee and directed by Daniel Chacon. The stage manager was Christine Calderon. Others in the cast were Michael Taylor as Bessie Smith's boyfriend and Vickie Gonsalves, a second nurse.

The second play, Impromptu, was written by Tad Mosel. It was about a group of acting hopefuls instructed by a stage manager to improvise a play in front of a live audience.

They all disagreed on how to accomplish this. First they tried to tell the audience about themselves. Finally agreeing on a plot, they disagreed again and one actor walked off. They never quite got their act together before the lights went out.

The cast included Dan Irons as Ernest, Allan Gill as Tony, Lisa Amy Reitz as Winifred and Tere Olguin as Lora.

I could not get into this play, but that was the fault of the script, I believe, rather than the performers. It was a good effort by all, but a meaningful story was just not there.

About sixty people attended the Saturday night performance.

No Fees

I am greatly relieved by the board of trustees decision May 4. By a slim margin, partly because of student's strong feelings, they voted to forego installing student fees for now. I am deeply grateful to Mr. Thonesen for his thoughtful and humble reflection that maybe we could try harder to cut the budget before we resort to student fees. Many students at the meeting, seemed hysterical. We share the suspicions of the general public that our officials are maybe corrupt and arrogant. But it would be well for us to remember that there are many officials who are honestly trying to do a decent job and work for the good of us all.

This hopeful moment for us will be costly. Many students are warning that maybe we will be quite sorry later when we see the programs that will be cut. Many of you might be angry with us for our efforts. But I want to let you know we thought we were following the decent and just course.

I firmly believe one can learn and build an education, sitting on a dirt floor with a piece of shale in one's hand to write, listening to a teacher making a bare living wage. I have had the pleasure over the years of meeting many foreign people who learned their basics in the simplest of classrooms. The level of basic knowledge of many of them puts a very great many of us to shame. This is the point I am trying to make, we can make really hard decisions to ensure the widest possible education for all. I am deadly serious when I cite the dirt floor and shale example as an extreme I would go to to ensure that education.

I would like to put some teeth into my words and show the board of trustees that the student body means to act in good faith in this grave situation. I propose all further events and activities supported by student body funds be eliminated. The whole sum should be used for student scholarships and purchasing textbooks. I also propose there be a large reduction in the number of copies of the Rampage being published. Fewer copies can be passed from hand to hand and read over and over again. Many students do this already. Fewer copies may also mean students will appreciate them more. I make these proposals hoping they will become the first steps down the road of our future prosperity, the road of thrift, cooperation, fairness, and a regard for the rights of all.

H. Fotherby

Fees and Sacramento

There is an aspect of the materials fee issue that has generally been overlooked. It has to do with what all students — not just ASB officers or task force members — can do to forestall fees and preserve existing programs. They can simply be better students.

Bluntly put, community colleges at present are not taken seriously by the Sacramento legislators who control financing. They are aware that too many students start courses they don't finish. They know very few community college students transfer to four-year colleges. They know that only a handful bother to take two-year degrees or show up for graduation exercises.

It is not sentiment or rhetoric that moves legislators, it is facts. And the hard facts about community college students are very discouraging. They make community colleges — including Fresno City — look like Mickey Mouse outfits, academic jokes, or as one critic put it, "gymnasiums for intellectual cripples."

Students who think the projected district deficit can be made up by such measures as dipping into the reserve, asking teachers to teach extra courses at no pay or cutting administrators salaries are naive and uninformed. Sacramento will loom larger in any long-range funding solution than any combination of local adjustments. But Sacramento will not be in a mood to be generous until community college students themselves start acting like they deserve the education they say they want.

Optometric Graduation

by Dale Cahill
Rampage Reporter

The Fresno City College Optometric Assistant Program graduated ten students in ceremonies held Friday in the faculty dining room.

Presiding was Martin Brown, Associate Dean of Health Arts and Sciences at FCC.

Speaking on behalf of his fellow students, Michael Lepper reflected on the past few months before graduation.

Lepper emphasized the importance of program director Dr. George Milkie. Lepper referred to Milkie as "an irreplaceable asset to the program. Lepper said the present job market is down but as optometrists becomes a more complex field, opportunities will become more widely available.

Lepper thanked his fellow students for their mutual support of each other during course work. He also thanked the Private Industry Council and promised it "a high return on their investment." Lepper said, "I plan to stay in this field and continue to learn."

Congratulating the class of 1982, Patricia Alviseo, president of the Private Industry Council, stressed the meaning of success. She wished the class good luck through the coming years.

Graduating from this year's Optometric Program were: Stephanie C. Blair, Sue Ann DeFehr, Aloyce Echeverria, Sara Susana Garcia, Judith Ann Gonzales, Jenny C. Holguin, Michael Edward Lepper, Andrea Maria Nystrom, Robin L. Ramey and Bertha Silverie.

Dr. Milkie told the graduating class, "You make me very proud."

Milkie acknowledged that five of the graduates have already secured jobs in their field. After Dr. Milkie's remarks, Dr. Clyde McCully, FCC President, presented graduation certificates to the students.

Among those on hand for the ceremonies were Harold Deems, representative from the Department of Labor, which along with The Private Industry Council of Fresno and the Fresno Optometric Society, helped fund the program.

This is the second year FCC has offered the Optometric Assistant Program.

It was noted in the graduation ceremonies that the program is in danger of being cancelled due to district budget difficulties.

President

students. There is a great deal more student apathy now and not many students are concerned with student government or even want to participate.

"It (apathy) will affect the government basically because many of the other executive posts were pretty much uncontested except for the executive vice-president. Of the 16 senate positions available, only nine students chose to run for office. Next year there will be seven vacant senate positions. "It would be a great compliment to us if because of our accomplishments this year more students will choose to run for office next year," Pineulas said.

When asked how he plans to overcome distrust and disinterest in student government, Pineulas replied: "I think there may have been some setbacks in the previous administration. I would say they resulted from poor communication."

He added, "Oddly enough, I was under the impression that some groups felt that they were given one story and other groups another story. People were left outside and unnoticed."

"My strong feeling is that it is always best to involve people in an activity from the very start — including the planning stage and throughout the entire process. Then come time when decisions or recommendations are made they are so well informed that suddenly they feel very much a part of things. That is the idea of communicating with the student body."

Pineulas believes he can be decisive as president without jumping on a bandwagon going in no particular direction.

"I look at the position of president as the captain of a ship or team; he is not the only person who executes or carries out all the plays. It is a co-operative effort." Pineulas said he knows that to take charge without leadership can lead to blunders. He is cautious of the hazards of glory-seeking individualism and prefers the team concept.

"When issues are presented to the students you must have a number of people involved, not just a single person jumping on a bandwagon but a group of people working together. I think that everything should be carried out that way, I hope it will."

He pointed out as an example the issues of the materials fee. He said the president should not feel obligated to assume responsibility in the decision making process.

Pineulas feels since the fee proposal will affect so many students it will take a commitment from a large group of students to influence the board's decision.

The State Center Community College District Board of Trustees recently voted against a mandatory materials fee.

Pineulas and the student task force will be faced with the issues of the materials fee next September or October when the board of trustees will once again review the controversial situation.

"Before I would go off to Diablo Canyon and get arrested, I would be concerned first with the issue of a materials fee." — David Pineulas

Unlike his predecessor Pineulas would like to open lines of communication on the fee issue to the student body and have a solid rapport with the board of trustees to minimize program cuts. He would like to see the preservation of some programs despite predicted massive cuts.

"We have to look at this issue objectively," said Pineulas. "We can't be sure if we are going to have materials fees or find alternatives."

"We must take a realistic look at the budget and make sure students have access to the various concepts. There are various groups on campus who would like to be assured that certain programs are continued and not cut. Alternatives are for us to seek and consider."

Programs to raise revenues for the ASB are top priority for Pineulas and his cabinet for the upcoming semesters. One program which Pineulas would like to see improved is the sale of ASB cards.

Last semester ASB card sales were down 14 percent from a year ago. Pineulas considers this a serious problem and a threat to the effectiveness of the ASB senate to provide student services.

Increasing the amount of student services and activities, making student body cards a worthwhile investment for the student will boost card sales, says Pineulas.

"We will try to set up a calendar of events and prove to the cardholders we can provide student services and make them worthwhile."

"We need to develop more programming, not just dances and concerts. I'm talking about the fine arts and a lecture series, perhaps a more extensive film and video series. We need more things on campus for students to participate in."

At this time, however, Pineulas hopes to convince students of the card's worth as a practical investment.

With the many concerns on campus such as ASB card sales and materials fees, Pineulas feels that the ASB senate should involve itself first with student government affairs, and not with political issues far removed from FCC.

"Before I would go off to Diablo Canyon and get arrested I would be concerned first with the issue of a materials fee," said Pineulas.

"I feel that we have enough work to do right here," he said. "We can't take care of the rest of the world, the state, or even the city."

Regarding off-campus legislation, Pineulas added, "I feel that if it (legislation) was something that would be directly related to student concerns, such as housing in the area around Fresno City College or the bus systems, the ASB should address it."

Pineulas believes that hard work will pave the way for a successful term in office and sees no major obstacles that would keep him from pursuing his goals.

"Perhaps that most difficult thing to do is to get around and introduce ourselves to the many groups on campus and the administration."

With the support he feels he can gain from the ASB senate and the student body, Pineulas is confident that there will be greater levels of communication throughout the campus to make the task of ASB president enjoyable.

Pineulas said, "I don't foresee any obstacles now."

Litter-Law Will Clean State

by Dale Cahill
Rampage Reporter

There is one thing all California highways have in common. Whether it's along the coast highway in Big Sur, through the orchards of central California, or in the mountains, California's roadways are cluttered with litter consisting mainly of beer and soda cans.

In comparison, Oregon's highways are virtually free of all litter—most notably, cans and bottles.

The main difference between the two states' litter can be directly attributed to Oregon's anti-litter law. California does not have such a law.

The typical deposit law works like this: The consumer pays a nickel deposit on each beverage bottle or can. The deposit is refundable when the container is returned to a grocery store or recycling center.

Deposit laws are presently in force in Connecticut, Iowa, Main, Oregon, Vermont, and Michigan, and in 1983, in Massachusetts, and Delaware. This fall the anti-litter law will be on the ballot in California.

According to the General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress, litter in Michigan dropped 87.4 percent the year after the deposit law took effect in 1978. Several Michigan cities reported reductions of six percent in total solid waste.

The container industry claims deposit laws cause an inconvenience to the consumer.

The container industry also claims litter laws create unemployment and sanitation problems which result in higher prices for consumers.

The facts, however, speak differently. In all the states with deposit laws, the GAO found more jobs were created by the law than lost. The GAO also reported that after the Department of Agriculture inspected 5,029 food retailers in Maine, it did not issue a single citation for sanitation violations related to the deposit law.

John Piacentini, President of Plaid Pantry, a major chain of grocery stores in Oregon (a litter-law state) and Washington (no litter law), responded to a Consumer Reports question that a deposit law causes beverage prices to rise. Piacentini said a consumer in Oregon buying soda or beer would pay no more for the same beverage in Washington, except for the refundable five cents.

New York, which is presently considering inacting a bottle deposit law, determined that recycling, plus the increased use of refillable bottles, would save at least 11 trillion BTU's a year.

If New York and California join states with deposit laws, proponents of bottle laws feel a federal law might be passed by Congress as soon as next year.

So far all states with deposit laws are proving that there is a definite environmental benefit. California is one of the most beautiful states; it is also a very populous state with serious litter problems. The anti-litter law in California could reduce waste, and help keep the golden state golden.

Milly Randall Retires

by Nina Tinker
Rampage Reporter

Milly Randall, administrative secretary for the Humanities Division at Fresno City College, is retiring after 14 years with the college.

Born and educated in Illinois, Randall came to California in 1948 and joined the FCC staff in 1968 as secretary to then humanities dean, Franz A. Weinschenk.

At that time, Randall said, the humanities and social science divisions were being formed from the Liberal Arts division. Dr. Wilbur S. Beasley was named social science dean and Weinschenk as humanities dean. When Weinschenk retired in 1980 she became secretary to Dr. Carl D. Waddle, the present humanities dean.

Two coworkers share secretarial duties with her in the humanities offices.

Randall said she has thoroughly enjoyed the past 14 years at FCC and appreciated the opportunity to be associated with the faculty, students and staff.

Retirement, she said, was going to mean more time with her family, but she would miss the FCC group a great deal.

Orchestra Concert

The Fresno City College Community Orchestra will present a concert of American music on Sunday, May 16, at 4 p.m. in the college theatre.

Works by Copland, Gershwin, Victor Herbert, Leroy

Anderson, and Joplin will be presented.

According to orchestra director Alex Molnar the concert will feature "lighter" works by the American composers, and includes the performance of some seldom heard pieces such as "The Lullaby For Strings," by George Gershwin.

The concert is free. For more information call the college's music department at 442-4600.

Lost and Found

by Nina Tinker
Rampage Reporter

Kenneth Shrum, chief of the State Center Community College District Police Department, said the department faces a problem at the end of each semester. Lost and found items turned in to the Fresno City College police center must be claimed by the owner.

Shrum said the length of time the campus offices held lost items varies. Unclaimed items are often turned over to the police department.

He said persons wanting to locate lost articles should come to the police office and fill out an information card. Persons turning in lost articles make out reference cards.

One incident Shrum related was about an FCC student that had lost over $200. She came to the office in tears. Much to her surprise, she learned the money had been turned in.

He said they have one ring that is quite valuable and that a very valuable watch is also awaiting its owner.

Shrum said, "I want to make it very clear that if any owner does not claim a lost item in a given length of time it can be returned to the finder." Lost clothing, he said, is turned over to the FCC theater, books are given to the campus book store, and bicycles go to the Fresno City Police Department to be auctioned off. At the present time, Shrum said, his office has items that were turned in several semesters ago.

Political Survey

by Chris Comstock
Rampage Reporter

While most Fresno City College students can identify the governor of California as Jerry Brown, they are far less certain about both the names and the parties of other elected officials.

In a recent survey conducted by Richard Bartel's political science class at FCC, 383 males and 371 females were polled on their knowledge of government. While the women generally showed less acquaintance with those who run California, the men did not fare much better.

Governor Brown was identified correctly by 90 percent of the men and 88 percent of the women. However, the Lieutenant Governor, Mike Curb, was only known by 67 percent of the men and 55 percent of the women. Evidently, Senator S.I. Hayakawa has more visibility than Senator Alan Cranston, since 70 percent of men and 50 percent of women knew him, while only 48 percent of men and 36 percent of women could identify Cranston.

Respondents were even less informed about these officials' political parties. For example, only 26 percent knew that Cranston is a Democrat.

Another section of the survey dealt with factors that influence voting for candidates. Respondents selected "policy" were often than such choices as "party," or "media," or "physical appearance."

The survey also asked if those polled believed in freedom of speech for various controversial groups, such as communists, ERA supporters, Nazis, demonstrators, and street corner evangelists.

The answer was a definite yes—for all groups.

Waterpolo Team Finishes Third

Julie Kienast
Rampage Reporter

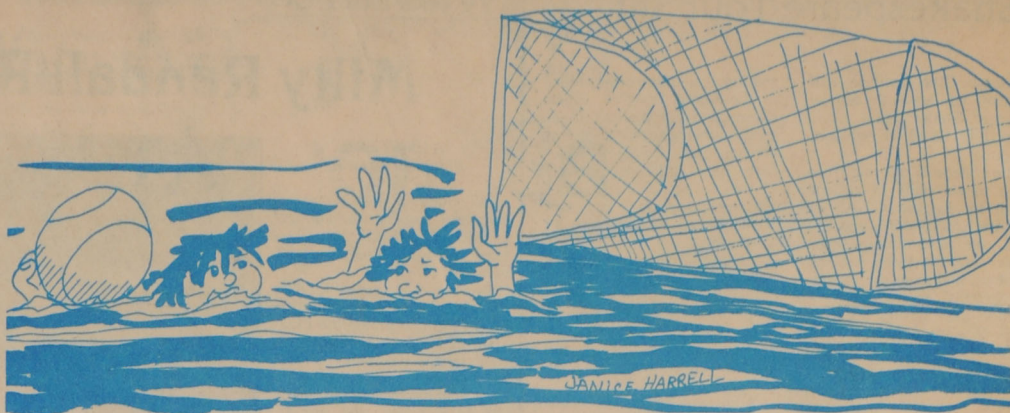

The Fresno City College water polo team won the Delta Tournament and ended third in the Central Valley Conference this season.

The Delta Tournament included Diablo Valley, Merced, and Fresno. The Conference consists of Merced, Modesto, Reedley, and the College of the Sequoias.

Over the season the team won 14 games and lost 8. Coach Gene Stephens gave a lot of credit for the team's success this season to Andy Schroeder, a former Ram swimmer and water polo player who took over the coaching of the team during Stephens' illness.

Steve Sessa was the high scoring player of the season, and Erich Ramsey was the outstanding goalie. Other players are Ken Cherry, Mike Donnelly, Dave Eller, Todd Meck, Don Pierce, Dave Stewart, Rod Teeter, Gerald Uhrig, Ralph Ujano, and Jason Whipple.

Ferguson Retires

Fresno City College math teacher Phillip A. Ferguson will retire this month after a 33-year career that included teaching stints in all grades from elementary school to junior college.

Ferguson joined the FCC Staff in 1979 following 12 years at Kings River Community College, FCC's sister institution.

A classroom traditionalist, Ferguson assigns every student homework every day, and returns all work graded the next. "If they don't do it themselves," he commented, "they won't learn it. They only learn by doing — and doing it a lot."

Ferguson advises his successor to "look for the better in kids. Determine what they can do, and work from there. Don't expect too much — at first, at least. But don't give up on students either."

Ferguson holds two degrees in music from Indiana University and the masters degree in mathematics from the University of Illinois.

He and his wife plan a trip to the midwest this fall "to enjoy the colors."

Ferguson said, "The one thing I'll probably miss most in the next few years will be the contact with the students."

Fresno City College will sponsor a seminar on the eating disorders anorexia and bulimia on Saturday, May 22, from 10 a.m. — 1 p.m. in forum hall "A."

The seminar will explore the medical and psychological aspects of anorexia and bulimia, and the physical, cultural, and social aspects of these disorders and various methods of treatment.

The seminar will be led by psychologist Marilynne K. Kanter, and Erica Tucker Goode, M.D., a doctor of internal medicine in San Francisco.

Community College Week

by Bob Millar

You may have noticed a lot of special events going on around campus last week. They were to celebrate Community College Week which was May 9-15.

Community College Week is a state-wide event held to recognize the educational and cultural contributions made by the state's community colleges.

The college's symphonic band performed a free concert last Tuesday in the college theatre. The concert featured a wide range of music from classical to pop music.

On Wednesday it was Laser Odyssey, a laser light show, featuring rock, jazz and classical music ranging from Pink Floyd to Beethoven.

The laser light show used five helium-neon lasers to project complex three-dimensional patterns. It also featured the use of a quadraphonic sound system.

Original compositions by FCC music students were also performed Wednesday in the recital hall.

On Thursday jazz musicians performed a free concert of contemporary jazz in the recital hall.

Fresno City College celebrated Community College Week as being the state's first community college, established in 1910.

Volleyballers Finish Second

by Nina Tinker

Fresno City College's volleyball team closed the season on a winning note, according to sports information officer Jim Alvernaz.

In their seventh year at FCC, the court players entered the 1982 record book by being the only team to beat College of the Sequoias. Another high light, said Alvernaz, was the second place finish in the conference.

With two best seasons back to back, Jane Shriver, second year coach and PE instructor, gave credit to some of the top players who came to FCC from Fresno's local schools. Most valuable player and first all-conference pick was a sophomore, Sheila Shaver, from Hoover High. Kay Roberts, a sophomore from McLane High, made the second team. Honorable mention picks were Cheryl Lieder, a sophomore from Central High and Stacy Kunishige, a sophomore who came to FCC from McLane High.

Spikers Take Conference

by Bob Millar

Fresno City College's men's track team finished in second place in the Central Valley Conference.

They posted a 5-1 record in conference meets defeating all opponents except Modesto.

The Rams finished at 6-2 overall. They scored 131 points in the CVC relays to take 1st place in that event. They also won the CVC championships, chalking up 206 points in that final meet.

The FCC women's track team finished its season with a 6-0 mark — good enough to capture first place in the CVC.

The women finished with a 7-1 overall record, losing their first meet to American River.

The women also placed second in the CVC relays and took a first in the CVC championships.

Honor Reception

by Julie Kienast

An honor reception will be held Sunday May 23 in the main cafeteria dining room for students graduating with a grade point average of 3.0 or higher. Those included will receive a letter announcing the event.

The students will be given a gold tassel as a symbol of their pursuit of excellence. Other symbols available to be checked out for commencement exercises include a gold hood for grade points of 3.85 or higher and a gold cord for grade points of 3.5.

Dr. Lily Small, current affirmative action officer at Fresno State and the past president of an honor society, will speak to the honor students. Members of the faculty, administration, and possibly some of the trustees will also be present, according to Don Munshower.

Members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, FCC honor society, will be on hand to help serve coffee, punch and cookies. Don Munshower said that an effort will be made to provide music for the event.

Hoopsters Place Third

Bumper Stickers

We've got 'em, and you're going to want 'em — two brand new Fresno City College bumper stickers. Yes, this is your chance to flaunt your Fresno City College allegiance all over the City of Fresno.

There are two different bumper stickers: one says "Fresno City College Will Always Be First... California's First Community College. Established 1910," and the other, the bit more assertive slogan, "Fresno State is Fresno's Other Big College."

In the spirit of Community College Week, the first 100 people who come to the public information office (in the administration building) this week (beginning at 8 a.m. Monday) will receive, absolutely free, one or the other of the bumper stickers.

The bumper stickers are available in the bookstore for 75¢ each. They are made of easy-to-remove vinyl, which means you won't have to remove your bumper to move your bumper sticker.
