A strike is averted

Board approves contract

by Levi Pagsuberon

A strike by the Fresno City College and Kings River Community College teachers was averted when the State Center Community College District Board of trustees approved the contract during its meeting held last Tuesday, May 3.

The Board of Trustees action came just in time to avoid a strike called for by members of the State Center Federation of Teachers, who voted in favor of strike action last April 22 if the deadlocked negotiations is not resolved.

Last week the ASB Senate passed a resolution standing behind the teachers' demands. At the same time, the resolution, called on both parties to settle the issue without resorting to a strike.

The negotiations between the SCCC Board of Trustees and the teachers union had been going on for more than 12 months.

Among the teachers demands were salary increases, improvement of retiree insurance coverage, increase in the number of sabbatical leaves and other fringe benefits.

The contract agreement as approved provided for a five percent salary increase, retroactive to April 1, for most teachers. The wage increase will be reflected in the salary schedule effective July 1.

The district will also increase its contribution towards health insurance premiums for members retiring after May 3, 1983 from the present $350 to $800 a year until the retiree reaches the age of 70. For active employees, the district will contribute a maximum of $160.20 per month for each employee's health insurance.

Beginning in the 1984-85 school year, the district will increase the number of sabbatical leaves from eight to 12 per year, paying 50 percent salary for teachers on sabbatical for a full year and 100 percent for one semester.

However, all contract disputes have not been settled. Now that the 1982-83 contract is settled, the two sides will begin renegotiating certain points for 1983-84.

Student appointed to advisory post

by Denise Bartlett

Fresno City College Associated Student Body President Pro Tempore, Steve Steuart, has been appointed to serve on the statewide California Community College Chancellor's Advisory Committee for Academic Quality.

Steuart was one of only two student members appointed to serve on the committee.

The committee serves to evaluate the state community college educational programs and degree requirements, plus review student services, and specially funded programs.

The committee is comprised of students, faculty members, and administrators, each sharing an equal vote in decision making.

Steuart will travel to meetings throughout California while serving on the academic quality committee.

Steuart sees his appointment as giving FCC greater representation on the state level.

"I'll be more or less representing FCC, being as I am from here," said Steuart.

FCC's Enabler program is also honoring Steuart for his efforts in organizing the "Handicapped Awareness Day" last October.

The event, sponsored by the Enabler program, and the ASB was held to introduce services available to handicapped students.

Other students honored by the Enabler program were Dan Betancur, Ken Forbes, Mark Riley, Refugio Montoya, and David Sepulveda.

Breakfast cancelled

The Associated Student Body has cancelled the breakfast scheduled for Saturday, May 14, from 6 to 11 a.m.

"Due to the time factor of finals, we didn't feel that we could carry the project," said Associated Student Body Vice President Dennis Balakian.

To date, the project has not been rescheduled.

Residents must pay fees to park

by Levi Pagsuberon

Homeowners in the vicinity of Fresno City College who desire restricted parking on their block must pay a $60 fee for the first year.

The amount represents what it will cost the city to provide the parking service. Fees will be set annually.

In his recommendation to the Fresno City Council last week, Traffic Engineer James O. Whitmer said that in order for a street to be classified for restricted parking, each homeowner will have to pay $5 for administration and issuance of permits, $35 for installation of parking signs, and $20 for enforcement.

Last March, residents around FCC petitioned the City Council to classify the streets in the area of restricted parking. Property owners were upset about vehicle overcrowding and their inability to park their own cars near their homes.

Students of FCC had protested the move due to inadequate campus parking facilities. The students contend that FCC sells 7000 permits when the parking lots have only 2,500 spaces.

"Homeowners have private driveways for their vehicles. Public streets should be open to the public," the students argued.

But the homeowners prevailed and the City Council passed the measure allowing streets around FCC to be classified for restricted parking provided that three-fourths of the residents on the block agree to pay the necessary parking permits.

Whitmer assured the city council that his staff will canvas the neighborhood to ensure that 75 per cent of the homeowners approve of restricted parking on their block before any fees are collected or parking permits issued.

The end of it all

by Delight E. Blackman

Endings are one of the sad, sober things that happen to us and this semester fits in that respect.

I am never prepared for endings. When I was little, I hated to get off of the merry-go-round when it stopped. My parents were always embarrassed by my grief-stricken howls of "just one more ride".

Frankly, I feel somewhat the same now, as the semester ends.

Being the editor of a college newspaper was of course a new learning experience for me. It was a strange but gratifying feeling to watch my plans, thoughts, ideas and theories take shape and become a printed page that people actually read (you did read it, didn't you?).

It had its good and bad points, like any other project. Several times I was driven close to the edge of despair over phrases that wouldn't fit, a story that was behind deadline, a missed appointment or a spelling error.

Then the good things balanced them out very nicely. We grew as a team, from a bunch of people who didn't know each other and who frantically bombarded questions at each other to a coordinated task force who actually discovered what it meant to work together. The late nights, the early mornings, the midday doldrums, they were all worth it.

Now, as I make arrangements for final schedules to be printed in this last issue, as I see the days growing warmer and longer and my time growing shorter and shorter, I revert to my old childhood habits of idealism, of saying to myself:

"Just one more time—" directed at my parents, teachers and the all-powerful Deity (Time).

I never wanted these good things to end.

Second thoughts on ag museum

Editor,

Over nine million dollars is going to be sunk into the Old Administration building so it can be transformed into an agricultural museum, that, by all rights, should be built at Fresno State University (an ag school).

There are many reasons why there should be second thoughts about this project.

Cows, chickens, tractors, and tourists do not belong on a City College campus.

The Old Administration building has been neglected for too many years to still be renovated at the original estimates.

The costs of the project would not even include bringing the building up to earthquake standards.

If the project is completed it will pose more of a problem than it already is, by causing problems during construction, and after construction concerning parking.

The building is too small for the kind of museum envisioned by its supporters. FSU, Kearney Park, or even the old Sun Maid factory would provide much more space for the large agricultural displays that are planned.

The original plans that were drawn up for FCC should be completed, and the campus purged of this last ghost of FSU that keeps haunting "City".

There are many more reasons why the "ag museum" should go somewhere else. Just take a few moments to think about it.

UnFinnish Business

Four wheels or two legs

by Timo Tuovinen

I have compromised my values and bought a car.

Those months of depending on leg power and the Fresno Transit were a period of endless inconveniences in my life. Life without an automobile in Fresno is a trying experience, believe me.

I tried it.

I remember those cold winter mornings at the bus stop, half asleep, sipping hot coffee from my thermos mug while waiting for the bus. The thermos would be empty by the time the bus finally arrived, not to mention the couple of times it never came.

If I had a test in my morning class, I had to come to school a half an hour earlier just to make sure I was on time. Those foggy and cold morning waits on the lonely campus were seemingly endless. I could not even read a book in the library since it did not open before eight.

I also remember the dark, rainy Tuesday nights, hours after the last bus ran its route. Some friend or an acquaintance would pick me up from my night class, and the rain would slowly soak me as I watched people in their warm and comfortable cars speed by. If only I could have one too, I thought.

Not having a car made me dependent upon other people. I wasn't free to come and go. I always had to wait for someone else and my life was generally planned around bus schedules. (I still read the morning paper in about a half hour, which is the amount of time I had to skim through it during the bus ride.)

Seriously, the planning of Fresno leaves a lot to be desired. Long distances and inferior mass transit paralyze people who do not have cars.

I was one of those "carless" outcasts; a member of the group of hookers and other street people who can be seen walking on the streets. Some streets do not even have a sidewalk.

The automobile hegemonia can be seen in that many streets do not have any lighting whatsoever. Right, why bother? The cars have their headlights, don't they?

Having a car means freedom to me. Freedom from dependency on others.

But that freedom has its price. I've given up part of my ideals, one which is supporting public transportation as a sensible and economical means of getting from here to there.

Automobiles make people dependent on the cost of gas and repairs as well as pollute our air and deplete our oil resources.

By becoming a car owner, I have taken an evolutionary step towards greater adaptation to my environment. I have responded to a need which is very real to me.

Sometimes while driving my new car, I wonder: "What else will I compromise? Will I give in to the System to the extent of buying personalized license plates?"

Along with this last UnFinnish Business column, I would like to thank all of you who beared with me through this semester.

All your comments, negative and positive, are valuable for me as I continue to learn more about writing.

I hope you enjoyed reading UnFinnish Business at least half as much as I enjoyed writing it.

Sincerely,

Timo Tuovinen

The house that FCC built

by Griselda Mares

Carpentry instructor Ken Walls and his class have been building a two story house for the last two semesters. The completion date has been set for May 25.

According to Walls, this house equals any custom built home and is of much higher quality than most tract or economy homes.

The house is located on the corner of Sierra and Villa in Clovis.

"This is an excellent area for the house because it's not an urban atmosphere. There is still space," commented Walls. The front of the house is cedar siding while the sides and back are of stucco.

This two story house covers 2,074 square feet. There is a two door, three car garage with electrical doors, with the doors set up by the electrical wiring class.

The front lawn is not landscaped and according to Walls, will be the responsibility of the buyer.

The front room has a large window facing the street, as well as a red brick chimney.

The family room and the den are not divided. Carpeting throughout the house will be brown plush, except for the kitchen and three bathrooms, which are covered in vinyl.

The kitchen cabinets are built by the mill cabinet class and will be of oak wood.

There is one bathroom downstairs and two upstairs. The master bedroom, which is upstairs, has its own bathroom while the other is in the hall.

There are three bedrooms upstairs and one downstairs.

"The downstairs room can be used as an office," said Walls.

The staircase and other wooden parts of the house will be made from oak wood. "I often exceed the (building) requirements because I want the students to learn how to build a high quality house," said Walls.

Students in the carpentry, electrical wiring, mill cabinet, air conditioning, sheet and metal classes all contributed their skills in building this house.

By June 28, the house will be up for public auction. The minimum bid will be $92,000.

Last year's house was sold for $57,500 but it was only a 1,700 square feet one story house.

"Last year's house was a typical tract house and the location wasn't as good as this year's," said Walls.

Next year's house will also be built in Clovis on Willow and Sierra. It will be a one-story house occupying 1,700 square feet.

Debate between candidates

by Carlos Cordova
Special for Rampage

Low student turnout and poor weather affected the debates held last week by candidates for the Associated Student Body Senate.

ASB elections were held May 10-11.

A strong MEChA slate led by Larry "Bear" Rivera, Pat Andrews and Mark Knipper criticized the current ASB for not bringing the major issues of the campus to the students.

"The only way you can generate any student power on this campus is to promote the issues in time for the students to act on them," said Rivera.

"A few individuals shouldn't decide what happens on this campus. The ASB should inform the other organizations about what is going on," said Andrews.

Knipper, who earlier in the year resigned from the senate, said, "The reason I chose to work with MEChA and not the ASB is because the ASB doesn't get anything done."

Duncan Scott, who was running without an affiliation, said "I haven't heard of anything from the ASB in the year and a half that I've been here (at FCC)."

Current ASB President David Pinuelas said "The issues have always been brought to the students. Many of the senators belong to different factions and organizations and information is disseminated in that way."

President Pro Tempore, Steve Steuart said, "there is a definite communication gap between the students at large and the student senate."

"We've been fighting student apathy for so long that we became a little fatigued," said senator Dan Betancur.

Elections Commissioner Kelvin Ashford said the weather and poor turnouts during the debates will not affect the elections.

"Many of the candidates took it upon themselves to advertise," said Ashford.

"Also the new rule that allows voting without an ASB card will bring more students to the polls."

Knipper leaves, vote falls short

Impeachment effort fails

A move to impeach ASB President David Pinuelas was narrowly defeated and ASB senator Mark Knipper bitterly resigned during the January 27 meeting. The vote for impeachment came after claims of "numerous unauthorized charges" were made by Pinuelas on the ASB's credit card while attending California Community College Student Government Association meetings. Pinuelas contends that ASB faculty advisor Lee Farley knew about Pinuelas' charges, and that Pinuelas intended to reimburse the ASB.

The council says this raise is necessary to maintain the college's financial stability. The raise will be implemented starting in the next fiscal year.

Artist Clayton Turner exhibits the form that enabled him to overcome the handicap of paralysis. His 34 year art career has established him as an outstanding craftsman of Old West art.

An artist who paints by mouth

by Delight E. Blackman

Clayton Turner has struggled for 34 years to reproduce the beauty of western art as he perceives it.

Not once during those 34 years has he held a pen or paintbrush in his hand.

Turner, 47, was paralyzed from the neck down when he was 14 years old. He is a handicapped artist, grasping the pen or brush in his mouth.

During his artistic career he has had drawings exhibited throughout the United States and Lichtenstein, his artwork having been recognized as being some of the most painstaking and authentic Western art material done in modern times.

For Turner, the metamorphosis from dependence to self-reliability was not easy. "I can remember... how tremendously pleased I was in just finally being able to write my name," he says, in recalling the struggle. "I had no help; I did it myself." As his writing ability slowly grew, he would write letters to relatives, and gradually, the attempts at artwork started.

His path to success was often punctuated by bitter mistakes. "I had drawn a beautiful, large saguaro cactus, but had not put in any sort of background," he recalls. When he later attempted to draw in the background, the drawing was ruined.

However, the disappointments did not stop Turner, and he went on to develop a distinctive and compelling style of work that can be seen, among many other places, at his rustic Western style farmhouse-gallery near Fresno.

The gallery reflects his love of the West. Cactus plants are visible in the front and back walkways. A covered wagon is in the back awaiting restoration. There are wagon wheels nestled in the grass. The many antique chairs, chests, tables and lamps that are inside complete the setting and blend with the many paintings and drawings on the walls.

Turner is also an accomplished short story author. His work has been published in the Arizona Quarterly, a publication put out by the University of Arizona. He is currently seeking a publisher to compile an anthology of his stories, accompanied by his own illustrations.

He can look up at the walls of his gallery and see a progression through the years. "Some of the first things I did, when I look at them now, would need so much improvement," he says. It can even be seen in his first triumph: writing his name. The clear, broad, elegant strokes that make up his signature now are a world apart from the first attempts. "If you put a pencil in your mouth and tried to write for the first time your efforts would be the same as mine were," and he proceeds to demonstrate, first the finished name, and then an illegible bunch of scrawling. He has admittedly come far.

"Every artist's work reflects a growth pattern. It is part of the struggle."

The years of hard work have made Turner ever aware of the problems and needs of other disabled artists and other handicapped people. "I want to continue being a representative of disabled people."

Rampage/Terry Pierson

Turner's gallery walls are covered with paintings ranging from a portrait of John Wayne to desert animals.

Merced team corners Rams

by Tom Ferrall

Errors, either mental or physical, they always seem to comeback and haunt you. The Rams 7-4 loss to Merced last Thursday at John Eulless Park was a perfect example.

For all but one inning the Rams played a good game. But in the fourth the error syndrome set in, and that spelled defeat for FCC.

With one out in the top half of the fourth and Rams holding a 3-0 advantage, third baseman Lawrence Cano committed a throwing error to allow Jeff Hintz to reach first. That error was turned into a run when designated hitter Rob Ferreira blasted a home-run off FCC starter Gerald Wagner.

An out and one walk later, second baseman Mike Ramirez made a bad throw to first baseman Jeff Stark, which kept the Merced inning alive. The Blue Devils took advantage of this gift by ripping three straight RBI singles.

After reliever Mike Daniels walked Lyle Kakazu, Merced's Hintz followed with a two run single. Daniels then got Ferreira to ground out and end the inning, but the damage had been done. Seven runs on five hits and two errors. Only one of the runs was charged as an earned run to Ram pitcher Wagner.

The frustrating loss lowered FCC's record to 4-6 in the CVC's second half and 16-18 overall. The victory boosted Merced to an impressive 7-2 mark and into a first place tie with COS for the second half crown.

The Rams scored a run in the first when Ramirez came home after a throwing error by Merced's Craig Camello. In the third FCC scored two more runs with the help of two Blue Devil errors.

Cano and Derrick Hardamon got aboard on errors by shortstop Dan Truax and Camello. Ramirez sacrificed the runners over to second and third, and Jeff Stark's ground-out to second scored Cano. Ram designated hitter David Greene, who had three hits on the day, singled to center to score Hardamon.

The Rams final run came in the sixth on a sacrifice fly to left field by Donny Garrett.

Merced ace Brad Arnsberg collected his seventh win of the season against only two losses. The 6'4", 200 pound sophomore pitched seven innings, surrendering six hits and two earned runs. Charlie Cash pitched the final two innings for Merced, allowing no runs, two hits and striking out three. Wagners record fell to 2-3.

FCC track teams qualify

by Mike Bledsoe

Freshman Jeremiah Wheeler broke a school record and 20 of his teammates qualified last Saturday for the Northern California Community College Track and Field finals. The finals are being held today at Sacramento's Hughes Stadium.

Wheeler led the men's team by qualifying in the 100 and 200 meters, and in the 400-meter relay. He had the best qualifying time in the 100, with a hand-held clocking of 10.27 seconds. This breaks the school record of Sam Davis, who set the record of 10.3 seconds.

Other men qualifying for the finals were Garnel Taylor with a first in the long jump and a fourth in the triple jump; Ed Hotz with a third in the hammer; Oscar Garza with a second in the discus and a seventh in the hammer; Leroy Rivera with a second in the steeplechase; Leroy Spears with a second in the shot put; Robert Guzman with a sixth in the hammer; Byron Williams with a tenth in the long jump and a seventh in the triple jump; Carl Johansson with a seventh in the javelin; and Rick Swenson with a sixth in the high jump and a second in the 400-meter relay team.

Sharon Pierson qualified in three events for the women's team. She placed first in the discus, and took sixth in both the javelin and shot put.

Also qualifying on the women's team was Lynn Graham with a fourth in the shot put; Loretta Aragon with a seventh in the 100 and a ninth in the 200; Marianne Rhodes with a fourth in the high jump; Joy Geary with a fifth in the long jump; Lezette Sears with a sixth in the long jump and a tenth in the 1,600-meter relay team.

Service!!

Fresno City College's Mike Lantis shows the form that gave him the Central Valley Conference singles championship last Saturday at Roeding Park. Teammates George DeVries and Alan Guthrie teamed up to take the doubles final as FCC breezed to its second consecutive CVC tennis championship.

SPORTS DESK

Rams smash valley rackets

by Tom Ferrall

"Wayte" until next year" is the only thing opposing Central Valley Conference men's tennis teams can be heard mumbling to themselves after running into the remarkable Ram netters.

Coach Bill Wayte's highly favored men's tennis team made the long-shot betters go home with empty pockets, as the Rams coasted to their second consecutive CVC tennis championship.

Sophomore George DeVries was top-seeded going into last week's league tournament, but somebody forgot to tell teammate Mike Lantis. The transfer from Fresno State defeated DeVries 6-3, 6-3 in the singles final.

Before the day's play ended, however, DeVries evened the score with his teammate. In the doubles title match DeVries bounced back with the help of sophomore teammate Alan Guthrie to post a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Lantis and Ernie Garcia.

After reading the above scores you are probably wondering why FCC teammates were playing against each other?

It's simple, the Rams had the best players.

Lantis and DeVries made it to the singles final by romping over players from Porterville, Kings River, COS and Modesto. The FCC doubles teams picked off the CVC opposition as easily as a pitcher picks off San Francisco Giants baserunning wonder Jack Clark.

Since nobody could beat the Ram players, it was an all-Fresno City final Saturday. Coach Wayte's club entered the tournament with a 30 dual match winning streak, which meant not being able to beat the Rams seems to be an epidemic.

One word to describe this year's Ram tennis team. Awesome.

On Friday, May 20, Ratcliffe Stadium will lose its manicurist. FCC maintenance man George Kennett is hanging up the rake and saying goodbye to the old stadium.

Kennett, according to his buddy and John Eulless groundskeeper Tony Vitale, has been working at Ratcliffe for seven years. Before that he put in many years on the campus of FCC. "Ratcliffe won't be the same without George," said Vitale who has worked at Eulless for 12 years now.

Before every football game, track meet, or any event ever takes place at Ratcliffe, Kennett is hard at work making sure the field and stadium is ready. But after one more week that burden will not be his.

Good job George, good luck and have a happy retirement.

Since this is my last column of the semester, I must give credit to these following deserving parties:

Thank you coaches Gary Hulst, Chuck Stark, Bill Wayte, Gene Stephens, Bill Musick, Len Bourdet, Fred Bartels and Bob Fries for your help and support given to myself and my fellow Rampage sports writers.

A very special thank you goes to Sports Information Director Jim Alvernaz for all of his great help and valuable knowledge. Despite the fact he's a San Francisco Giant fan, Jim is all right.

Valley Racing Association's new Micro-Tote 1000 (the new totalisator system installed this season) has made playing the ponies a lot more fun for Fresno betters.

The new system has made long betting and cashing lines a thing of the past. Micro-Tote 1000 allows all betting and cashing to be done at one window, regardless of denomination or type of wager. The system also allows a player to bet the whole day's racing card before the first race is even run.

Speaking of betting, if you happened to see coach Stark and coach Hulst smiling ear to ear last Friday, it wasn't because they found a four leaf clover.

They found something better.

They discovered a horse playing system that landed the coaches one exacta after another. Was it luck, or have they found a true winning system?

Only time and the size of their wallets will tell.

Concert

The Fresno City College jazz bands will present their last concert of the school year Sunday, May 15 at 8 p.m. in the FCC Theatre.

On Sunday's concert, the FCC jazz band A will be joined by the "City Singers", the outstanding vocal jazz ensemble, directed by Le Grand Andersen.

Admission to the concert is $1.00.

All the first place winners on the state level will compete at the San Francisco conference.

"Our team was awesome at the state convention. We are expecting many awards from the national competition, and are looking forward to (possibly) having the first national president from Fresno City College," commented Mrs. Sherian Lyles, advisor of the Fresno City College PBL club. "We are doing much of the work for the convention, since FCC is the home of the national vice-president, Lisa Gunland," Lyles went on to say. Gunland is California's candidate for president. Each state can only have one national officer.

The San Francisco convention will be represented by 21 students and three advisors from Fresno City College. The local chapter has 53 members, which is the largest in the state.
