DOLE HEADLINES FAIR

By Amy Klassen-Cox

Elizabeth Dole paid a visit to Fresno on Tuesday, October 1 to tour the agricultural exhibits at the Fresno Fair and to campaign for her husband, Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole.

She began her address with endorsements for local and statewide Republican candidates before launching into her speech, praising her husband and finding fault with President Clinton's first four years as president. She spoke to the farmers in the audience, calling her husband a "friend to agriculture." She spoke of Bob Dole's plan to roll back estate taxes on farms and to protect private property rights by fighting regulatory burdens.

She also spoke of her husband's wartime involvement in the military and the injury that he received in the line of duty. She outlined how much Clinton had cut defense spending and told the audience that Bob Dole would increase military spending. She stated that Dole would bring back the strong military force that we once had, quoting former President Reagan by saying, "You need to be strong enough to keep the peace."

Family values were not left out, and she detailed Dole's plan to help America's families pull ahead financially. To begin with, there would be a fifteen percent across-the-board tax cut with a $500 per child tax credit. She also stated that Bob Dole would balance the budget so that we don't pass our debt on to our children. She also advocated a deduction on the home office tax.

Next on her agenda were the issues of crime and drugs. She said that under Bob Dole, with the help of state governors, there would be no parole for violent criminals. Prisoners would work a forty hour work week to offset the cost of their incarceration and to provide victim compensation. She stressed the importance of having a Republican president to the Republicans due to the fact that as many as three Supreme Court Justice positions may be vacated within the next four years. These are lifetime appointments made by the president.

The U.S. drug problem was also addressed. She stated that the Clinton administration had virtually ignored the situation, and as a result drug use in America has skyrocketed. She promised her audiences that Bob Dole would wage an all-out war on drugs, using the U.S. military if necessary.

On the issue of education, she endorsed opportunity scholarships that would allow low and middle income families to send their children to private schools. The desired outcome of this would be that the competition would force public schools to provide a higher quality education to their students.

According to Clayton Smith, the Chair President for the College Republicans here on campus, her overall message was "extremely positive and very optimistic." She encouraged valley Republicans to "roll up your sleeves and go to work" on getting her husband elected president. She cautioned voters against paying too much attention to polls, adding that if Dole took California he was in the clear for the United States presidency. She charmed the audience with her southern grace and left the stage with a confident air totally appropriate to a potential First Lady.

Journey Through The Looking Glass

"Alice in Wonderland" opens this thursday in the main theatre at Fresno City College and will have a longer run than usual, catering to all ages especially the young at heart. Sets, stage design and costumes are by Dan Wheeler and the production is directed by Debra Shapazian, based on the story by Anne Coulter.

Welfare ? Elimination

By Melissa McClintock

Welfare reform is a dirty word to some people in the Valley. It is long overdue, other residents may claim with a sigh of relief. Eloise Anderson, the California Director of Social Services recently spoke at the FCC Forum to address the controversial issues surrounding the new welfare reforms. "What does the safety net mean", Anderson asked. The current program allows a parent (usually a female) to receive benefits until the youngest child turns 18. The reforms that will be implemented by the Federal Government in 1997 will change the program drastically, women will only be entitled to benefits for 5 years in the lifetime of raising children. An audience member asked if the reforms will cause families to become homeless. Anderson stated "Women chose to stay on AFDC because it allowed them to stay home with their children; which is what it was designed to do, not because they don't have anything else". Anderson advocates that when welfare is cut, former recipients will go to work. Why not? It is a negative assumption to think individuals aren't capable of doing this.

Considering the fact that 27% of the federal budget is spent on welfare, 15% in the state of California. "There are more people on aid here, than 21 states have in population" Anderson revealed as the audience gasped.

In the 1930's the federal program which is known as welfare, was initially set up to help widows with children. In 1930, only 4% of children were born out of wedlock, as opposed to 30% of children born out of wedlock in 1996. Anderson explained this, noting society and the roles of women have changed over the 60 year period. The modern conveniences which we take for granted in our daily life, have allowed women to work outside the home.

Over the last 60 years, the welfare program remained stagnant while society progressed. While people tend to resist change and while those changes may be uncomfortable, it is necessary for the welfare program to be updated to address the needs and issues of the 1990's.

SIFE NEWS

Can you imagine having barely obtained your B.A., being offered an executive management position for a major corporation which had previously only hired persons with a M.S. in business administration? It happened to one young man in Kansas City, Missouri. He was at a SIFE competition when the CEO of GNB Technologies said, "I want to hire him!"

SIFE is an acronym for Students in Free Enterprise and "it is quickly becoming the premier organization on campus," said William (Bill) Syvertsen, faculty advisor to SIFE.

Dental Hygiene Department Celebrates Its National Month

College Republicans Recruit Members

Ramthought: Will the College Republicans require recruits to brush their teeth?

With this year's presidential elections approaching, the Fresno City College Republicans are starting to reconvene again. This year the issues are hot, and the once guaranteed victory for President Clinton is not so sure as the Republican nominee Bob Dole is on the rise. The College Republicans are providing an avenue for students to actively participate in the political process and helping them learn about the standards and ideals of the Republican Party. Students who would like to find out more are welcome to attend the meetings (times and dates are posted on public bulletin boards), or they can call the College Republican line at 299-1896 and request information on how to get involved.

In honor of National Dental Hygiene Month, Fresno City College's Dental Hygiene Department will have a "Tooth Booth" exhibit on campus Tuesday, Oct. 15th, from 9:00 until 3:00. All members of the student body and college personnel are invited to stop by the booth, which will be located just outside the bookstore. There will be toothbrushes for sale at a price which will put a smile on anyone's face! There will also be an opportunity for anyone to make an appointment for a dental cleaning at the clinic. The Dental Hygiene Clinic offers sweetly reduced rates for all areas of dental hygiene, which includes x-rays, cleanings, and sealants. Stop by and speak to any of the dental hygiene students at the booth. They will be more than happy to explain the clinic procedure or any other dental hygiene inquiries.

F.C.C. Art Club—More Than Just Pipemakers

The F.C.C. Art Club is a student based organization on the campus of Fresno City College. Our mission is to expose members, students and the community to the many facets of art, stimulate their appreciation and love for art. We wish our members and other interested students to be informed of projects and to actively participate in the mechanics of creating and placing the finished projects in and around the Art Building. We are hoping to encourage more participation, and that the building beatification project will spread to other areas of the campus.

We are doing a new project that will include the two dimensional design students this year, placing exhibits of their work in the student lounge for everyone's enjoyment.

We have at this time, a continuing project, the tile mural to be placed around the center planter in the interior courtyard of the Art Building. It is 32 linear feet of a lot of fun (we hope). We are planning another Block Party as the last one was an outstanding success and the sculpture in front of the Art Building still generates many compliments and people ask to be involved in the next one.

Another projected activity is Tiles, Tiles, Tiles. This consists of individual tiles to be created by students and interested members of the community and be placed permanently on campus.

Our meetings are the first and third Wednesdays in room AH-102 at 3:15. The club also maintains two information bulletin boards located in the hallway between AH-102 and AH-105, and in the ASB Office above the bookstore.

Crow..... a Show Stopper

The 112th Fresno Fair opened with a bang on October 1st when Peter Droge and the Sinners and Sheryl Crow brought their melodious rock sounds to the Paul Paul theatre.

Sheryl Crow kept her fans grooving and even urged people to vote in an introduction to a song written about her trip to Bosnia with First Lady Hillary Clinton. She kept her spirits up and the music going, despite having beer spilled on her by a fan that rushed onstage. Crow gave concert goers a night to remember.

Peter Droge and the Sinners got the night rolling with material off of their 1994 debut album as well as a few songs from their most recent release, "Find A Door." Having toured with Tom Petty for three months, their music reflected Petty's influence. After they finish their tour with Crow, they will continue to tour the U.S. and Canada with Neil Young.

Both acts never failed to please the crowd that packed the theatre and spilled out onto the surrounding lawn. Ever conscientious of her fan's needs, Crow even featured a sign language interpreter.

Coach Bombay (Emilio Estevez), the Mighty Ducks' original coach took up a better job offer somewhere else and left the Ducks with a no-nonsense coach in a new private school. The Ducks were forced to deal with new rules from Coach Orion (Jeffrey Nordling) as well as the snobbish varsity hockey team and their pranks. In order to prove that they belong in the school, the Ducks were determined to win a game against the bullies of the Warrior Varsity.

Frustrated with Coach Orion and the new school environment, Charlie Conway (Joshua Jackson) left the team, leaving the Mighty Ducks in disarray. With the help from Coach Bombay, Charlie finally realize why Coach Orion is the hard-nosed coach that he is and rejoined the team. Charlie learned what is meant to grow up and deal with life's many challenges.

THAT THING YOU DO... BY LEAH EDDENS

Yes, it was Tom Hanks' first go at writing and directing a film; a film based on the true story of a teenage band sensation in the early 60's. Maybe Hanks made a good call by taking on such a safe plot, but I think that was exactly the problem. It was safe. Too safe.

One thing I wish I had walked away from this movie with is a one-liner like Forest Gump's "Life is like a box of chocolates," Tombstone's "I'm your Huckleberry," or even Mrs. Doubtfire's "Hello." No offense Guy Patterson (the main character), but I don't think I'll be shouting out, "I am Spartacus!"

Enough of the negative. I won't condemn the movie for several reasons. First, because it was very decent. No sex, no violence and hardly an ill spoken word. Second, because I am a music lover, and the film had a lot to do with keeping the art of music pure for music's sake. Third, because it made me laugh. I enjoyed getting caught up in the energy, and happiness and getting to know the quirky personalities of each character. Lastly and perhaps most importantly, I liked the movie because I adore Tom Hanks.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Butterfield's: Go for the brew instead of the food
I've been to Butterfield's about 100 times. Ninety-nine of those trips however were straight to the bar. So this was the actual first time I've eaten dinner here. The bar and grill (located at 777 E. Olive in the Tower District) is famous throughout the valley for its exquisite beer that is made right in front of your eyes.

Butterfield's has earned a reputation as one of the top west-coast micro-breweries. Butterfield's offers a wide range of food choices for lunch or dinner with prices ranging from $6.95 to $12.95. I decided on linguine and clams with a side of garlic cheese bread for dinner. The service was really good. The waitress was friendly, attentive, and never let me sit at an empty glass or a clean plate. The food, however, was less than impressive. After eating my salad and cheese bread, I was ready for the main course only to get a plate of pasta that was of mediocre size and taste.

But don't think I left Butterfield's disappointed. After dinner I sat at the bar and relished the taste of a Raspberry Wheat Ale while watching the live jazz band that was playing that night.

This is where Butterfield's shines. The atmosphere is casual and laid back with an excellent selection of fine beer and live music.

RAMusic review

By Ryan LaMar

The beast is unleashed, the Best of the Beast that is. Castle Records completes their onslaught of Iron Maiden reissues by creating a collection of their greatest hits.

Though the regular single cd version will be released Oct. 15, already for sale is the special edition double cd set, limited to 75,000 copies. This set contains 27 remastered Iron Maiden classics, including four collector's tracks. Exclusive to this package is new studio track "Virus" which will not be on their next studio album and the first live track featuring Blaze Bayley on vocals, "Afraid to Shoot Strangers." It also contains two tracks taken from the Soundhouse Tapes sessions, "Iron Maiden" and the previously unreleased "Strange World."

Complementing these two picture discs is a sixty page hard cover book. Inside are over 200 photographs portraying the journey and changes the band has endured for over 21 years, accompanied by a thorough timeline. In addition are lyrics, a comprehensive discography, and the Iron Maiden family tree which shows the evolution of the band, including the origin and continuation of every person who once was or currently is a key member.

Suggested retail price is $31.98. Though this price is steep, money is not an issue for any true fan. But for those who are just passive listeners or have tight budgets, the cheaper regular edition will arrive soon. And it will be worth the wait.

'SHARKS' IN FRESNO

by Scott A. Mayes

It was September 26, 1996. Fresno was pretty quiet. And then there was Selland Arena.

Local favorite San Jose held a preseason exhibition against the defending Stanley Cup Champions, The Colorado Avalanche.

Fresnans, with bated breath, showed up to take in the ice as withdrawals from Tark's Tank were vaguely diminished.

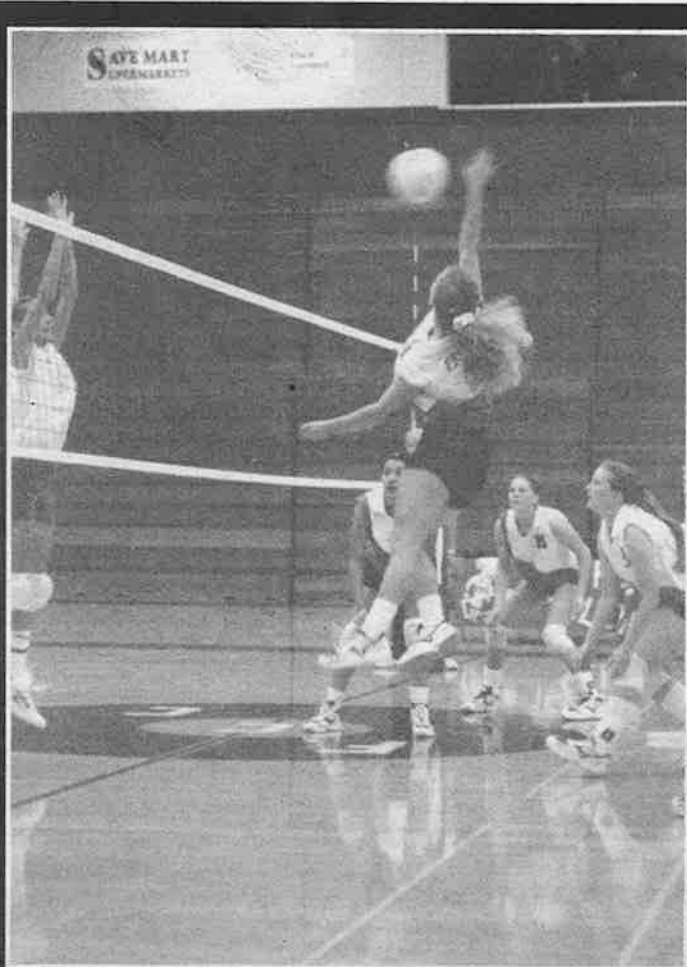

The crowd of 6,002 watched an incredible defensive dual. The fans were treated to a 0-0 gut check in sudden death overtime.

Each team had 30 shots on goal during the scoreless contest.

In a freak occurrence, the final fifty-four seconds of the first half were played at the start of the second half due to the falling of a plexiglass wall panel in the Fresno facility.

The CALIFORNIA Circle

by Scott A. Mayes

In the weeks to come this column will take an up close look at the NFL. I will focus on the California teams and bring you up to speed on upcoming games and key matchups. In picking these teams, I am 13-4 this season.

I am a perfect 5-0 picking the San Francisco 49ers. I am 4-2 both for the Oakland Raiders and the San Diego Chargers.

For the Raiders, I misfired on their opening day loss to the Ravens and I had them beating San Diego at home in week 4.

As for the Chargers, of course I missed the Raider game and I also had them losing to the Chiefs in week 5.

Now that you're up to speed on my games, let's take a closer look at the NFL in week 7:

SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS

The 49ers are running away with the NFC West as expected. The only real threat might be Carolina. The 49ers have a one game lead but they did lose to Carolina which could be a factor come playoff time.

Week 7 has the showdown of the season thus far: San Francisco at Green Bay. This game will be played, no less, on Monday Night Football.

Both defenses are looking good right now. Through the first 5 weeks of the season they rank 3rd and 5th respectively in points allowed. San Francisco is allowing 12.75 points per game while Green Bay is giving up 13.20 to go with their potent offense.

On Offense Green Bay is leading the NFL in scoring with a 33.40 average. San Francisco is second with 26.75 points per game.

I think that the problem with this statistic is that Green Bay has played a much tougher schedule. San Francisco's opponent's have a combined record of 5-16. Green Bay, on the other hand, has played teams totaling 17-17.

Brett Favre is looking unstoppable and Antonio Freeman has picked up well while Robert Brooks has been banged up. The running game is average but that's all you need with this quarterback.

San Francisco has question marks in their backfield and I think this will be the difference in the game. Steve Young has not played in two weeks due to injury. Elvis Grbac played injured against the Rams.

Terry Kirby is transitioning but the run game is still a little weak. Jerry Rice can make up for a lot but Green Bay is too strong. Green Bay will win a close one and jump into the stands at Lambeau Field.

OAKLAND RAIDERS

This could be a very strange one. This game matches up two teams that really know how to give a game away. In week 5, the Raiders blew a 17-3 lead to a hapless Chicago Bears team en route to a 19-17 loss.

Their week 7 opponent, Detroit, had a 28-0 lead against Atlanta in week 6 and came away with a 28-24 victory.

Both teams have the ability to score a lot of points but have more mental errors than they can corral.

Barry Sanders, Herman Moore and the likes of Scott Mitchell give Detroit a lot of weapons to worry about.

For Oakland, Tim Brown is always a threat. Second year running back, Joe Aska, showed a lot of promise in the win over the Jets. (but it was the Jets.)

The Raiders have the better defense but have far more penalties and mistakes. As long as Wayne Fontes stays out of the way, Detroit will win. It will be close but Oakland will give the game away.

SAN DIEGO CHARGERS

The 4-2 Chargers have a bye in week 7.

San Jose No Test For Football Team

Rams Even Record at 2-2

By Ernest 'E' Shelton

The first weekend of October the Fresno City Rams football team reached .500, after 4 games in the 96 season by beating San Jose City College 50 - 19. The Rams stopped a two game losing streak evening up their record at 2- 2. The Rams' defense allowed 19 points in the first half, and then they shut down San Jose's offense by not allowing them to score in the second half. The past two games, against Grossmont and Butte, Rams offensive unit scored only 6 points. In the first two quarters of the game FCC was able to put 24 points on the board before going into halftime with a 5 point lead. Coming out from halftime, FCC scored 26 more points leading to the final score of 50- 19. When asked what was said during halftime to help produce the final outcome of the game, 1st year Head Coach Vance Stanley responded by saying "we changed some defensive assignments. As for the offense, they played well in the first half so there were only a few small changes." The FCC Rams were taking out all their frustration, from scoring only 6 points in 8 quarters, San Jose City College just happened to be in the way. The Rams next big test, before beginning conference play, will be Sat. Oct 12th at 1:00 pm against De Anza City College at Ratcliffe Stadium.
